OLD GUARD WINS IN SENATE FIGHT

Penrose Defeats Progressives in Finance Committee Chairmanship Contest

By International News Service.

Washington, May 26.—The caucus of the Republican Senators today adopted the entire slate of committees arranged by the Republican committee on committees. The slate was as drawn by the "Old Guard" and the efforts of the Progressives to block Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania from the office of chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance failed.

Senator Johnson of California, one of the leaders of the Progressive branch of the party, made a motion in the caucus to strike out the name of Senator Penrose as chairman of the finance committee, but the motion was lost, 35 to 5, and the nominations were finally accepted as presented by the committee on committees.

Senator Curtis of Kansas presented a resolution demanding that the Republican party stand in favor of a vote on the woman suffrage amendment at the earliest possible moment and the resolution was adopted. The action, however, does not bind the individuals as to their votes.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN.

Among the progressive members of the Republican party who had sided in the fight against Senator Penrose and who did not attend the caucus today were Senator Norris of Nebraska, Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, Senator Borah of Idaho, Senator Jones of Washington, Senator

OVATION AWAITS HARRY HAWKER

Reception Like That Given Monarchs Is Planned for Rescued Aviator

By International News Service.

London, May 26.—A reception like that accorded visiting monarchs awaits Harry G. Hawker, intrepid Australian aviator, and his navigator, Mackenzie Grieve, when they reach London tomorrow night after their dramatic rescue from midocean.

The two airmen touched land today for the first time since they started from St. John's, N. F., the evening of May 18 in their ill-fated attempt to fly across the Atlantic.

They came ashore at the Scotch seaport of Thurso, after spending the night aboard the British warship Revenge, and after receiving the homage of the entire town, boarded a train for London.

"It seems good to stand on something solid again," Hawker was quoted as saying. "For just a few minutes after we were forced down on the water I wondered if we would ever be on land again."

Neither Hawker nor Grieve would say whether or not they would make another attempt to fly across the ocean. Hawker said his first thought were for his wife and baby, who will greet him at the station here tomorrow evening. After that he will talk over plans with the Sopwith Aeroplane Company officials.

Theatrical managers and cinema producers telegraphed dozens of offers to both Hawker and Grieve today, asking them to sign fat contracts for appearances in London, but have received no reply.

The Hawker home was crowded with neighbors who stopped in this morning to kiss Mrs. Hawker and the baby and congratulate them on the almost unbelievable news. The aviator's wife, who had clung to the hope that her husband might be re-

Pompadour Will in Morgan Collection Pronounced 'Fake'

By International News Service.

Paris, May 26.—The discovery that the will of Madame Pompadour in the J. P. Morgan collection in New York is a "fake" was made by Paul Reynaud, French lawyer, while on an official mission to the United States, according to the weekly newspaper Cri de Paris.

A New York newspaper owner recommended that Reynaud look at the Morgan collection, says the Cri. The lawyer, who is also a connoisseur, drew the attention of Miss Green, conservatrix of the collection, to the fact that the supposed Pompadour will was dated 1770, whereas Madame Pompadour died in 1764.

The Pompadour will was one of the choicest in the Morgan collection of historic documents.

DRIVE EXTENDED TO PUT CITY OVER TOP

Wake up, you Boston.

The "Rallies" drive has been extended.

Boston is $150,000 short of its quota of $400,000.

Because of the inclement weather of the past week the drive, which was to end tonight, has been postponed and Boston will have until midnight Thursday to bring the fund "over the top."

Street activities, however, will cease tonight, and the further solicitation of funds will be confined to the hotels, theatres, business houses and homes, all of the agencies working with redoubled efforts.

"The extension of the drive is necessary to put Boston 'over the top,'" said Brigadier-General Charles H. Cole, in charge of the Boston campaign. "But that Boston will go over eventually I am confident. Co-operation, the support of all citizens, will do it. From now on everyone must give, keep giving and give until it hurts. Let every body 'double up.' By so doing we can succeed and save

BIG FOUR BUSY WITH AUSTRIA

Peace Envoys Consider Reparation Clause to Be Inserted in Treaty

Washington, May 26.—No German shipping now in possession of the United States is to be relinquished. Following reports that a large portion of the vessels taken over by and allotted to America probably would go to Great Britain and other countries, President Wilson, it was learned today, has assured Washington officials that "no one need have any fear" that this will be the case and that "an agreement has been reached."

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
Correspondent of the International News Service.

Paris, May 26.—With representatives of Rumania, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Jugo-Slavia present, the Big Four today discussed at length the reparation clause to be inserted in the Austrian treaty. General J. C. Smuts, Andre Tardieu, L. P. Locheur and Dr. Keynes sat in with the Big Four.

Arrangements for the presentation of the Austrian treaty are expected to be completed by Wednesday.

The greatest question is whether the Austrian population of the States created from former Austrian territory shall make good a proportionate share of the reparation demanded. However, despite its complexity, the Austrian situation is not causing any serious worry.

The Austrian envoys at St. Germain understand that everything possible is being arranged for their benefit and they will undoubtedly accept the terms, but under protest.

The problem of Asia Minor has now resolved itself into a question of agreement between the British and French. An American commission is leaving for Asia Minor to make an independent investigation.

The concessions made by the Big Four regarding the Saar Basin will be of benefit to Germany, but it was pointed out today by American experts that it would not be proper to interpret the concession as a pro-German one.

The actual facts are that the modification was made along the lines of the original American viewpoint, which provided that the question of redemption should be decided by the economic experts and the League of Nations. If Germany becomes a member of the League of Nations within five years she will be in a position to argue her own rights.

140,000 Starve While Rich Get Drunk in Vienna

Exclusive Cable to the International News Service from the London Daily Express.

Vienna, via London, May 26.—While the fate of Austria is being decided at Paris, Vienna is the scene of the wildest orgies of drinking, gambling and dancing. The wealthy class is showing the utmost apathy over the outcome of the peace negotiations.

The restaurants are crowded at night with fashionably dressed women. After drinking and dancing the restaurant crowds gather in private gambling halls to spend the rest of the night playing games of chance. These gambling places are frequently raided by soldiers and large sums of money are confiscated.

While this gayety is current upon the surface there are 140,000 unemployed who spend the days wandering through the streets seeking work and bread.

All eyes are turned on Berlin anxiously waiting to see whether the Germans sign the treaty or throw the country into Bolshevism.

WOBURN MAN SLAIN; PARTNER IS HELD

James Brown, proprietor of the Royal Cafe of Woburn, is dead, and his business partner, John Varras, is in jail charged with murder, as a result of an altercation in their place of business at No. 430 Main street, Woburn.

The cook of the cafe is held as a witness to the shooting. Several customers in the restaurant witnessed the shooting.

Both men engaged in a revolver duel in which five shots were fired. Only three bullets alleged to have been fired by Varras took effect, according to the Woburn police.

Witnesses stated that Brown, who died in the ambulance on the way to the Choate Hospital, entered the kitchen of the cafe and engaged in a heated argument with the cook. When Varras, the joint proprietor, went to the kitchen to ascertain the cause of the trouble, Brown turned upon him, demanding to know what business it was of his, it is said, and started to draw a revolver.

Varras whipped out an automatic pistol, following Brown's action, and started to shoot. Brown's shots went wild. All three of Varras' shots took effect and Brown fell to the floor in full view of the customers.

An elderly man a girl are known by the police to have witnessed the shooting and their names have been taken as material witnesses.

Varras fled to his room in the Atwood House nearby, where he was arrested by Chief of Police Charles F. McDermott. The automatic pistol with which the shooting is alleged to have been done was found, still warm, beneath a coat on the bed.

TWENTY VILLAGES IN RUINS

Seventeen Other Places Partially Destroyed by Eruption at Java

By International News Service.

London, May 26.—Fifteen thousand persons were wiped out by an eruption of the volcano Kloet on the island of Java in the Dutch East Indies, said a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam today. Seventeen other villages were partially destroyed.

The island of Java, with a population of about 30,000,000, has frequently been visited by disastrous eruptions, there being numerous active and extinct volcanoes in its mountain chains.

The best known volcanoes on the island are Tengger and Galunggung. Galunggung's eruption in 1822 many thousands lost their lives.

There are about 55,000 Europeans on the island. The casualties from this latest disaster probably were largely among the native inhabitants of the mountain villages.

The London reports indicate that this latest disaster may rival the ones caused by the eruption of Mount Pelee, which destroyed St. Pierre, Martinique, with a death list of 30,000 on May 8, 1902, and the volcanic earthquake which virtually wiped Messina off the map on December 28, 1908.

Kloet is one of the smaller volcanoes in the western end of the island of Java. In May, 1901, it broke forth into eruption after a period of inactivity lasting several years, enveloping towns 140 to 210 miles distant, killing about 200 per sons and destroying the sugar crop of the entire western end of the island.

There are fourteen active volcanoes in an area twenty-five miles by thirty-five miles in this immediate vicinity. They have destroyed hundreds of thousands of lives. In 1846 the Blinghit, one of the loftiest of the group, blew off most of its peak, and in a series of internal explosions that followed more than 10,000 persons were killed.

KAISER BEGAN WAR TOO LATE, SAYS BERNHARDI

Geneva, May 26.—General von Bernhardi, one of the foremost of the German junkers, writing in the newspaper Der Tag blames the former Kaiser "for not beginning the war soon enough, when Germany's enemies were less prepared." Another movement has been started by certain German political societies to restore the Hohenzollerns, according to reports reaching here. A meeting of the royalists was recently held at Jena, in the Grand Duchy of Saxe Weimar Eisenach, at which 200 persons were present.

'BIG 4' DECIDE IN FAVOR OF KOLCHAK

Exclusive Cable to the International News Service from the London Daily Press.

Paris, May 26.—The Big Four has decided that the United States shall not give military aid to Admiral Kolchak's (anti-Bolshevik) government in Siberia, but that the allies will recognize the government, providing the troops supporting it capture Moscow, it was learned today.

This decision is a victory for President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George. President Wilson plans to visit Brussels before leaving for home.

London, May 26.—Bolshevian troops have taken the important city of Tsaroff in their advance on Petrograd along with thousands of Bolshevik prisoners, said an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen today.

FLIER HAWKER'S FIRST THOUGHTS FOR HIS WIFE AND BABY

DELUGED WITH OFFERS TO APPEAR ON STAGE

cued long after admiralty officials had given him up as lost, hauled a Union Jack above the doorway and welcomed all comers.

"I had faith in my man," she said. "I felt he would come back."

The little tramp steamer Mary which picked up Hawker and Grieve an hour and a half after they fell in the ocean about 100 miles off the Irish coast, on the afternoon after they started from Newfoundland, was proceeding on her way to Denmark today.

The two aviators were taken off the Mary by a British destroyer, which dashed to sea to intercept her after she signaled a land station that she had rescued the Sopwith crew. The Mary carried no wireless and was unable to send news of the rescue until she arrived off the coast.

Both Hawker and Grieve said their motor was working in fine shape and they had every prospect of reaching the Irish coast Monday evening, when the water-filter became blocked with refuse, forcing a landing.

No event since the signing of the armistice has so stirred London as the rescue of Hawker and Grieve. The greatest excitement prevails here in anticipation of the arrival of the famous fliers.

CHURCHES OFFER PRAYER.

When the news of their rescue was received at Surbiton, Hawker's home town, the churches offered prayer and thanksgiving services were held. In this city, too, there were services of thanks and prayer offered for the plucky men.

Hawker was forced to descend into a heavy sea when 1100 miles of his 1900-mile trip had been covered by the water boiling away in his heated engine, caused by a clogged filter in the feed pipe.

The "Mary," bound from Norfolk to Aalberg, reported that she picked up the two fliers Monday in Lat. 50.20 N. Long. 12.10 W., approximately halfway between Newfoundland and the coast of Ireland, for which they headed after leaving St. John's at 8 o'clock last Sunday evening. The steamer happened along in the nick of time because the plane could not have lived long in the turbulent sea and the life-boat contrivance would have been of little avail.

In view of the rescue of the aviators Lord Northcliffe's order for a division of the Daily Mail prize of $50,000 between the families of Hawker and Grieve now becomes void. But the Mail announces that a consolation prize of $25,000 will be divided between the two men.

Plymouth, England, May 26.—Arrangements were completed today for the reception of Lieutenant-Commander A. C. Read, who is now at Ponta del Gada, Azores, awaiting favorable weather to continue his trans-Atlantic flight to Lisbon and Plymouth in the United States naval seaplane NC-4.

Mayor Joseph Pearce will meet Lieutenant-Commander Read at Mayflower Rock, whence the Pilgrim fathers sailed on the Mayflower for America nearly four centuries ago. A

'RESCUE ALMOST TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE'

Ace Bishop Calls Word of Hawker's Safety "Marvelous News"

New York, May 26.—"Marvelous news. It really seems too good to be true," said Lieutenant-Colonel W. A. Bishop, when told at the Hotel Biltmore of Hawker's rescue.

Colonel Bishop is a Canadian "ace of aces" and is American agent for the Sopwith Aeroplane Company.

Lieutenant-Colonel E. C. Parsons, military aviator, who served on the Mexican border and later in France, said in the American Flying Club that fifty years might elapse before the airplane would be of commercial value for trans-Atlantic flying.

Colonel Bishop said:

PRAISES ENGINE.

"It is marvelous news. 'I haven't heard a word from the Sopwiths yet, but that probably is because they understood I had already left New York.

"It really seems too good to be true. Of course, until we get his story of what happened to him all comments are based on pure conjecture. But of one thing I feel certain, and that is that his Rolls-Royce engine served him well.

"They say the Rolls-Royce never stalled over the battle line, but I will venture to assert that it never stalled anywhere, so long as it had petrol, oil and a spark. I myself have driven a Rolls-Royce from London to Paris, hitting all the way 90 miles an hour.

"It is the most expensive engine made, and is worth what it costs. Rayhnam has been quoted as giving $30,000 as the price of a Rolls-Royce, but my own idea is that it is from $12,000 to $20,000. A twin Rolls-Royce has been sold for 9,000 pounds, which would be about $45,000. I never used the engine in France, because I was flying mostly smaller planes, equipped generally with a Hispano-Suiza."

Colonel Bishop declared his confidence in the single-motored plane for the trans-Atlantic flight, although not for commercial purposes.

"Probably a multimotored machine for that, because they will want to carry more petrol," he said.

BEST ENGINE MAY FAIL.

"Ted" Parsons discussed Hawker's difficulties as follows:

"There are three things which might have happened to Hawker. His engine may have stalled through some defect which forced him down not far from his taking-off place; he may have been beaten down in one of the storms the weather reports show prevailed soon after his getaway, or he may have exhausted his gasoline. The Rolls-Royce engine is thoroughly reliable. At the same time, it should not be forgotten that there are other reliable engines. As much dependence may be placed on a Hispano-Suiza, which has passed the French tests and is well kept up.

"But the most reliable engine may fail through a weakness in ignition or failure of the feed pipe. That can easily have happened in Hawker's case, as it has with others.

"If he were flying at 10,000 feet and his engine stalled, Hawker would have had a circle of about 70,000 feet in which to pick out his landing place, the factor of safety with a Sopwith being about seven to one—seven feet of planing radius to one of elevation. This would have given him a sweep of approximately fourteen miles, and had a vessel been visible within that radius he could have alighted near it.

"But with the airplane, at its present stage of development it is a poor instrument for trans-Atlantic flying. The dirigible is subject also, of course, to weather conditions, but it has the advantage that, in the event of motor trouble, the difficulty may be adjusted without landing. It will be many years before the airplane reaches the commercial stage for long flights."

Germany Is Helpless; Says Noske

By ALFRED G. ANDERSEN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, May 26.—"Armed resistance to the allies over the peace terms would be a senseless sacrifice of human life. Some foolhardy Germans may doubtless take up arms, but the government will not support them."

This declaration was made to me today by Gustave Noske, Minister of Public Defence and known as "the strong man of the German Cabinet."

Herr Noske's statement was made in reply to my question:

"Could Germany resist in a military way if the peace negotiations should fail?"

"Germany has no army in the field," continued the minister. "We have only a police force, having already disbanded our military forces. Also we have surrendered our military materials in compliance with the armistice terms.

"With the entente forces marching into Germany it would be a continuation of the whole war murder policy."

Herr Noske said he was pinning his hopes to the American people, adding:

"I am convinced that the United States did not enter the war imbued with the egotism of conquest, but to to a growing understanding of nations and the fraternity of peoples; a peace which would avoid the existing differences and hatreds, giving humanity hope that war will be done away with in the future as barbarism, enabling all peoples to pursue their cultural pursuits."

Asked about developments on the eastern frontier the minister of defence readily answered:

"The government is not supporting the agitation to arm all able-bodied men against the Poles, but the population will doubtless fight against the unnatured Polish yoke to the last breath.

"The government, moreover, is hardly able to help, lacking the necessary materials. Still, one never knows what we shall do in the next few weeks. It is not true that Von Hindenburg is urging a resumption of the war. I am mixed in politics.

"The report that we have 300,000 armed men is most absurd; but I wish we had."

PREDICTS 'WAR' IF LEAGUE IS ADOPTED

Congressman Madden Warns of U. S. Being Tied Up in European Alliances

Washington, May 26.—"America should stand aloof from entangling alliances abroad. It cannot be possible for our people to mingle with the people there on equal terms—they do not think like we do. It seems a pity that the peace terms have not been agreed upon earlier. The failure to agree upon the terms of peace leaves a measure of doubt in the minds of all the people abroad," declared Representative Madden of Illinois, during a speech in the House this afternoon.

Mr. Madden had reviewed the story of America's participation in the war and concluded with a reference to the peace terms.

"Invisible border lines make it necessary for the peoples abroad to be watchful of each other. They are suspicious, one nation of another. You cannot make them otherwise. Their internal political hatreds are unfathomable," he commented.

"The League of Nations, which provides, if it should be approved here, for the defence of the political integrity and geographical boundaries of foreign nations, is likely to lead us into trouble. The nations that are being created are now at war with each other. They are likely to continue at war. They are fighting every day. It seems impossible to reconcile the conditions between them. The Balkan States must be recognized as the cradle of wars. Nobody could maintain their political integrity or geographical boundaries My judgment is that America should not send her boys to foreign territory for the purpose of maintaining foreign political integrity."

BOSTON LAGS ON DRIVE FOR 'SALLIES'

Boston from disappointing, not only the Salvation Army, but the men of the Yankee Division."

PHONE GIRLS OUT.

Today is Fathers and Mothers' Day and it was ushered in by the appearance on the streets of an unusually large army of volunteer girls and women workers carrying carnations. Thousands and thousands of the flowers were sold. The girls and women, mostly telephone operators, are sacrificing a day's pay to go about through the city's streets.

The day's activities featured a big noon-day rally at Belleau Woods on the Common. About 100 miniature bales of wool were sold at auction with bidders scrambling over each other in their efforts to secure a package.

Prominent among the speakers were Governor Coolidge, Penal Institution Commissioner Sanford Bates, representing Mayor Peters; Captain James Duane and David Brickley of the 101st Infantry and Colonel Percy A. Guthrie of the McLean Highlanders. Music was furnished by a naval band.

Following the auction of the wool there were two auctions of autographed pictures of Nora Bayes, the actress, and General Cole.

One of the campaign motor trucks used in the drive led the circus parade today. There were a score or more volunteer workers, some of Elkdom's women included, mounted on the truck singing. Behind the truck marched girls with outstretched American flags on which many hundreds and thousands of dollars were tossed. An Elk, dressed as Uncle Sam was kept busy, all along the line of march, scooping up the money and transferring it to hokey-pokey barrels drawn by soldiers and sailors.

'SANE AND SOON TO WED,' SAYS 'ROMEO' KEYS; 'LET JOY BELLS RING!'

PASSES 3 TESTS, HE SAYS

Tells of Sister's Visit to Boston to Prevent Ceremony if Possible

John Baker ("Romeo") Keys is sane, and wedding bells will soon ring out in celebration of his marriage to Miss Florence Girardin of No. 67 Romsey street, Dorchester, according to Mr. Keys himself today. "Yes, sir, I'm sane and soon to wed," says Keys.

The only obstacle to Keys' happiness is the presence in Boston of his sister, Mrs. Howard C. Hollister, wife of Federal Judge Hollister of Cincinnati, who is here to influence his friends against financing him, according to Keys, who is practically penniless since his sister and Judge Hollister succeeded in placing him under guardianship on the grounds of insanity.

Keys, it was learned today, is in possession of a certificate of sanity following three interviews with a leading alienist who pronounced him "free from delusions, confusions, depression and elation."

Under the original complaint against him, Keys is classed as a "circular maniac depressive." In the opinion of the unknown alienist, who is said to be among the leading alienists in America, there is no evidence of depression against Keys and his speech, handwriting and reflexes are normal."

THE SUN STILL SHINES.

The sixty-three-year-old "Romeo," whose tangled love affairs have precipitated many a tempest, is the culmination of his romance with the nineteen-year-old Harvard Club elevator girl, was elated over the prospect of soon lifting the guardianship which his relatives have thrown about him in the hope of preventing him from bringing the family into disrepute by marrying "beneath him."

How Keys discovered the presence of his sister in Boston, and how he met with a chilly reception at the home of his nephew, Captain John Baker Hollister, whose wife is a daughter of Montgomery Hollins of Hammond street, Chestnut Hill, was related by Keys today.

Keys told how, having no engagement for Sunday dinner, he though he would visit his nephew's family yesterday and see his little grandniece Ann Hollins, granddaughter of Montgomery Hollins.

THE SIDE DOOR, PLEASE.

When he approached the Rollins' mansion at Chestnut Hill his nephew's wife, he said, ran to meet him and took him into the house at the side door. There he was kept in the library, where he was successively advertised by Mrs. Hollister, by her sister and by Mrs. Rollins, but never a word did they say about the presence of his sister, Judge Hollister's wife, Keys said.

At last the time he was told that the family were invited out to dinner and took the hint to politely withdraw.

Today he called up the house where Mrs. Hollister was believed to be now to stopping, and was told by a maid that she had gone to the home of his married sister, Miss Mary E. Keys, at Little Boar's Head, New Hampshire. Investigation by a reporter afterwards corroborated this statement of Keys.

HAS RING ENGRAVED.

Although living on the charity of friends, Keys is reported to have made $25,000 during the last few weeks through the phenomenal rise in a local stock in the stock market. Keys' estate, which he is at present unable to control on account of guardianship proceedings, was recently inventoried at $200,000, Keys said.

"I am living off my friends for the present," declared Keys today at the Boston Tavern, where he has a room. "My sister, Mrs. Hollister, is in town in an attempt to starve me into returning to the sanitarium at Flint, Michigan, from which I escaped through the assistance of my attorney, William J. Kelley. She has already succeeded in turning a friend of the system to be developed by the War Department to provide trained engineers for the Army. The War Department has detailed Lieutenant-Colonel Edward W. Putney of the Coast Artillery Corps to the Institute as professor of military science and tactics. Sanction of the board of trustees will be given at the annual meeting May 31. Already nearly 100 of the present student body have volunteered for the corps.

SERVICE NOTES

The air service will now have a flight surgeon who will be assigned to fifteen stations. He will be made permanent surgeon and will have charge of everything connected with medical care of the flying men. The surgeon will also be expected to have a knowledge of flying and train for that service in case of emergency.

Major-General C. R. Edwards will speak before the Waltham Board of Trade this evening. He will attend Newton's celebration June 7, when that city will accord to the women in war service the same attention given to the men. "Don't forget the women in these town celebrations," urges General Edwards. "They have done excellent war service along with the boys."

Major H. D. Cushing of Hingham of the 101st Coast Artillery Gun Battalion, who was gassed overseas and whose battalion has the record of only "gassing" three out-and-out planes, called at army headquarters today while on his leave of absence from Camp Devens.

Walter L. Rose and John F. Butler have been appointed field clerks in the medical department at army headquarters.

EUSTIS AMENDS 'SPY' SUIT AT NEWPORT

Good Name Damaged by Codman's Remark, He Declares

Newport, R. I., May 26.—Frank F. Nolan and Charles H. Koehne, Jr., of counsel for Mr. and Mrs. George Peabody Eustis, have filed amended declaration in their slander suits against Ogden Codman.

Mr. Eustis alleges that he was a true and loyal citizen of the United States at the time Mr. Codman accused him of being a German spy.

He says that when Mr. Codman uttered the words, "I do not speak to German spies," Mr. Codman intended and meant that Mr. Eustis, although a citizen of the United States, "was a person lurking and acting as a spy in the service of the German imperial government, with which the United States was at war, in and about the fortifications, posts, quarters and encampments of the armies of the United States, and for the purpose of lending aid, comfort and assistance to the imperial German empire."

Mr. Eustis says that because of the word of Mr. Codman, he has been injured and damaged in his good name, reputation and credit, "and has been suspected of being a traitor to his country and has been exposed to the danger of prosecution and punishment as a traitor to the United States."

The War Department has detailed Lieutenant-Colonel Edward W. Putney of the Coast Artillery Corps to the Institute as professor of military science and tactics. U. S. S. MONTANA ARRIVES WITH 1,546 TROOPS

Also Brings Body of Machinist's Mate Killed During Flight of NC Planes

With forty-one officers and 1,405 men of the 314th Engineers, and the body of Chief Machinist's Mate W. M. Welch of New York, who was indirectly a victim of the NC trans-Atlantic flight, the Montana arrived today at Commonwealth Pier. The battleship docked at 11:35 a. m., but the men did not debark until after mess on board.

There were also on board 100 naval aviation ground men.

Chief Machinist's Mate Welch was attached to the Stockton, one of the station ships on the Atlantic during the flight of the three NC planes. He was struck by a flying bolt from one of the motor generators of his ship which lacerated him fatally in the abdomen. The Montana was at that time on her way to Brest. Summoned by wireless, she took the injured man on board, but he died that night.

IN WOOD'S DIVISION.

The 314th Engineers were members of the 89th Division, General Leonard Wood's unit of "fighting farmers," with whom he had expected to go overseas. They wore a large "W" as their division insigne, which all the men declared stood for "Wood." According to the officers, the letter stands for "West," most of the men being Westerners.

They took part in the St. Mihiel drive and in the Meuse-Argonne fighting. They were in command of Lieutenant-Colonel G. M. Leland, professor of engineering at Cornell University.

GAVE HOUSES TO BELGIUM.

The naval aviation men have been erecting portable houses in Belgium. The houses were originally intended as camps for the aviation group, but were turned over to the Belgian Relief Commission by Secretary Daniels of the navy as soon as the armistice was signed.

The Montana was met down the harbor by the Actus and the Monitor with welcoming groups on board, and the men were regaled by the pickets society workers on the pier. The engineers will go to Camp Devens for the sanitary process, and thence to camps near their homes for demobilization. The naval aviation group was sent to the navy yard.

KAY LAURELL INJURED WHEN AUTO OVERTURNS

New York, May 26.—Kay Laurell, noted show beauty, narrowly escaped death when her automobile turned turtle Saturday night, it was learned today. She jumped to escape being pinned beneath the car and was badly cut about the head. Six stitches were taken in her scalp, and she is confined to her bed.

LUSITANIA MEDAL DIES SEIZED BY GERMANS

Berlin, May 24.—The German government today confiscated the entire stock of dies with which the Lusitania Memorial medal was made, realizing that the circulation of the medals would hurt Germany in the entente countries. A few of the medals were carried out of the country and reproductions were printed in American publications.

About twenty-five yeomen (F), representing more than 1,200 in the First Naval District, visited the State House today to protest against their "exclusion" from the bill awarding a $100 bonus to soldiers, sailors and marines. They took with them a petition signed by all the yeomen (F) in the district, which they planned to present to Governor Coolidge.

On reaching the Governor's office they were told by his secretary, Henry F. Long, that the bill would not come before the Governor's consideration until it had passed both bodies of the House. The girls then went to the office of Speaker Joseph E. Warner of the House of Representatives.

The girls made a smart appearance in their uniforms, some being in the navy blue suits and others in the Summer uniform of white duck. They were led by Miss May G. Hurley, chief yeoman (F), who acted as spokesman. The group was shown over the State House by Edward F. Horgan, the Governor's body guard, and John Noonan of the Governor's staff, of the sergeant-at-arms.

The delegation included the following girls: Phyllis Kelley, Helen Murray, Harriet Barry, May Grady, May Mattie, Marie Flinkwin, Esther McCall, Helen I. Regan, Helen Noonan, Agnes McLaughlin, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Dorothy Hallacre, Winifred Judge, Clara Chambers, Cecilia Holland, Anna Gerrigan Ryan, Florence C. Gilligan, Katherine Connolly, Josephine Donoghue, Rose McNulty and T. Maud Donovan.

IS A 270-POUND "COP" A SPARROW? CERTAINLY NOT

It's a mistake to call a policeman weighing 270 pounds a "sparrow cop." It's a strategic mistake as well as an error in politeness, Joseph W. Mortimore admitted in South Boston Court today, when lugged in by Special Officer M. J. Deacy, tipping the scale at close to 300 pounds. Mortimore, of much smaller size, was fined $15 for assault, and costs for his admission, saying he was sorry he called Deacy a "sparrow cop" when told to move.

Pickets are still doing duty quietly. Although a few employes are at work, the factory is virtually tied up.

YORK IS EAGER TO RETURN TO HIS GIRL

New York Sights Pale Before Counter-Attraction to War's Greatest Hero

New York, May 26.—They simply won't let America's greatest hero of the war, Sergeant Alvin C. York, get back to that girl of "his" in Tennessee. The Tennessee Society has the man who single-handed put a whole German battalion out of action is tow today and they're showing the famous native son through the subways as a part of the program of reception. But York's mind is not on receptions or subways or the score of rich men's daughters that hang on his arm in unrestrained adoration. It's back there in Pall Mall, Tenn., on the banks of the Wolf River.

"You see," said he with the naivete that has endeared him to little old New York, as acclaimed to the awakening here in the city which the Tennessean is the antithesis, "I've got a girl down there, and I'm wishing and back."

"See name is Grace Williams and she hasn't written me in three month. I reckon it's high time that I was a-restin' up with her again."

This simple and unaffected comment uttered after the hulking sergeant had been literally "slung-hailed" by Tennessee Society on his return from Washington was strikingly indicative of the hero's character, coupled as it was with his great desire to see the subways more than anything else in New York city.

The Tennessean of the city rushed their charge down to Garden City, L. I., and put him up in the presidential suite of the fashionable hotel of the same name. "It's the best they got and I'm one of the commitmen said the Tennessean, "but it's none too good for me."

"Oh," said the sergeant, "I thank you." And forthwith he went back to sleep. Incidentally those two words constitute the average length of his comments. "He's shy on talk," said the committeeman, "but oh, Lordy, doesn't he make up for it in action."

Yet when such dazzling debutantes as Elaine Peters, Alice Harrington and Alice Jones are clad in evening gowns that would start a riot in New York's home town clustered around him at the dinner table, he was there as much at ease as any man at the table.

It was Miss Peters who prompted the sergeant to reveal his longing to get back to Pall Mall and the "girl." She had invited him to a game of golf.

"Perhaps I'll have a chance before I get back to Tennessee," said he, non-committally. Then follows the real reason for his haste.

And all the teasing of the debutantes failed to shake him from his intent another word about his "girl" from the sergeant.

PUBLIC WARNED AGAINST "WILDCAT" SPECULATIONS

Boston bankers are out to put a quietus on promoters of "Blue Sky" land deals in the West, "wildcat" mining propositions in Mexico, and other schemes which separate the unwary investor later finds out are under water and grow only alligators. In a statement issued today by Mr. F. L. Higginson, savings director for New England, it is asserted that many families had lost the savings of years to these "wildcat" promoters of all kinds, and that "Boston bankers want the Federal Trade Commission were trying to put them out of business." The Boston urges persons approached with these propositions to refer them to bankers before investing.

38 IN MALDEN GAMBLING RAID FINED $5 EACH

Thirty-eight young men from Malden, Everett, Boston and other nearby communities were fined $5 each in the Malden District Court today, on the charge of being present where gambling devices were found, and Thomas Bradshaw was fined $50 for maintaining a gambling nuisance. Sentences were imposed by Judge Tuttle. The defendants were rounded up in a raid Sunday about 6 p. m. at quarters of a labor and social society, and led by Eben W. Sears, Jr. The group was found on the second floor of an Eastern avenue house in Malden.

THREE DIE IN FAMILY WITHIN SIX WEEKS

Pittsfield, May 26.—Elisha Williams, seventy-five years old, superintendent of the Richmond Iron Works, died suddenly at his home here of a paralytic shock. He is the third member of the Williams family, one of the oldest in Berkshire county, to die in the past six weeks.

Mr. Williams had a brother, George W., and a sister, Mrs. Charles H. Scott, within six weeks. The survivors include a son, Raymond C. Williams, vice-president and secretary of the Richmond Iron Works.

LEAPS TO DEATH FROM FLAMING MAIL PLANE

Cleveland, May 24.—Horrified hundreds saw Frank McCusker, twenty-three, of New York, pilot of a mail airplane, fall 750 feet to death from his burning machine here yesterday, after he had announced that he would attempt to establish a record on his flight to Chicago.

Witnesses saw puffs of black smoke come from the rear of the Deliavland. When the machine had an altitude of between 500 and 600 feet McCusker was seen to climb from his seat to the frame. Then the airplane plunged and the pilot leaped. Uncontrolled, the machine shot forward 400 yards before it dashed into the ground.

McCusker was alive when picked up, but the mail pilot died while being taken to a hospital. His skull was fractured and his neck broken. He was formerly in the Royal Canadian naval flying corps, inspector of aviation at Hazelhurst Field, Mineola, N. J., and instructor at a United States aviation field in Texas, and is said to be the first fatality since the inauguration of the government airplane mail service. He was a bachelor and lived in the city.

The cause of the accident is undetermined.

MAKE DESERTERS REAL MEN, SAYS COL. DUNN

"Make deserters not criminals, but men to be serviceable hereafter," was the advice of Colonel George M. Dunn, judge-advocate of the Northeastern Department, who retired from active duty last month, and has made a special study of the slighter sentences given deserters in England and Canada, as compared with the drastic system for the United States. "If you set out to degrade a soldier, you have succeeded when you take away his self-respect. Therefore, if you are determined to get more good out of him, you must make his sentence a help to him instead of a millstone about his neck," observed Colonel Dunn.

UNSECURED CREDITORS GET 15 PER CENT. MORE

Unsecured creditors of the Foundry Liquidation Company, a Whipple-Harvey corporation, were granted a 10 per cent dividend by Referee Darling in the Bankruptcy Court today. Referee Darling also signed the agreement of creditors of the Machinery Liquidating Company and three allied plants resumes operations after three months' inactivity because of a labor dispute involving 15,000 men and women.

A hundred horses and a like number of mules have been supplied to the Boston Police, and the men will wear khaki uniforms, carry automatic pistols and wear regulation police shields.

WOMEN'S LACK OF CLOTHES STIRS PASTOR

Modern Styles Fast Reverting to Savagery, Says Minister

New York, May 26.—Howard Chandler Christy's statement in a recent interview that what is needed in woman's dress is more elimination, led Rev. John Roach Straton of Calvary Baptist Church to remark that "it will not be long before we will revert to the complete elimination" and the sweet simplicity that characterized savagery."

Dr. Straton made his sermon another diatribe against present-day styles for women.

"Women are complaining of the double standard of morals," he said, "and they do right to complain, but in Heaven's name let them be consistent and not by their mode of dressing, their dances and other practices unwittingly foster the very double standard of morals of which they complain.

"A fossilized octogenerian or a self complacent mollycoddle with ice water in his veins could be misled at the sights which any man can see in modern society today and hold in his arms a throbbing, beautiful young woman with almost half of her body exposed and the other half clothed mainly in good intentions; such a man I say might under these circumstances remain calm, but any young fellow with red blood in his veins and the natural forces of nature operating in him cannot so easily do so.

"The greatest evil in modern styles is the fact that the tendency today and more so in the future is for the purpose of directing attention to the sex idea.

"This idea is feed at us from magazine columns, in pictures and in the theatre. Not a man can go to the moving picture shows and the theatres and from the pages of the magazines avoid it. No man can escape it."

Dr. Straton suggested that it would be "just as logical for men to dress with an eye to sex appeal as it is for women to do so."

CZECHO-SLOVAKS SAVED PARIS, Y. M. C. A. MAN SAYS

Bangor, Me., May 24.—That the Czecho-Slovak armies had as much to do with the failure of the German drive on Paris in July as the western allies, was the claim made here by Walter Banton, a Y. M. C. A. secretary just returned after twenty-one months of service in Eastern Europe and Siberia. Banton fraternized "continued Mr. Banton, "with the Czecho-Slovaks who behind barbed wire the 400,000 German prisoners freed by Bolshevist officers, and I know that the part they would have been hurled across Germany and into the firing line in this sector to relieve the French and possibly would have turned the tide of battle."

PRICE OF ICE TO BE SAME AS LAST YEAR

Present indications are that the price of ice will remain the same this Summer as it was last Summer, according to George H. Yoter of the Boston Ice Company. It had been expected that with the coming of hot weather the price of ice would go up.

That the ten-cent size would be abolished this Summer was another expectation that probably will not be realized according to other Boston dealers. Any increase in price that may come, they state, will be beyond their control.

If high prices should go into effect contrary to Mr. Voter's expectation it would mean a resumption of the "cash and carry" plan of last year as worked out at the city ice stations.

BELIEVE DEAD MAN MEMBER OF CIRCUS

Believed to have been a member of the Seils-Floto circus, an unidentified man was found dead beside the Boston & Maine Southern Division tracks at Bacons curve, near the Medford-Winchester line last night. It is believed the man fell from a section of the circus train which passed that way from Montreal to Boston.

There was a long scar from near the left eye to the chin. The hair was very dark and straight and the cheek bones were high. His forehead had been crushed in. Dr. Charles McCaffrey, medical examiner, viewed the body.

FINGER PRINTS AS CLEWS LEFT BY BURGLARS

In a crazed desire to get narcotics, crackmen blew the safe at Carter, Carter & Meigs' State street store and secured $500 worth of cocaine, morphine and heroin. The safe-blowers ignored $600 in Liberty Bonds in the safe.

The thieves made a clean getaway. The police are working on fingerprint clews.

BLEW INSIDE LOCK.

They drilled the big vault, blew the lock with nitroglycerine and in the same manner treated a little inside safe containing the drugs. It took one boring for the vault and two for the safe lock.

The police believe that the break was made by persons who had a key to the store or hid within at closing time. In either event, when the job was finished, they unlatched a door leading to the main hallway from inside and left through the main door at 247 State street.

While keeping the main supply on an upper floor of the 11-story building, the company daily puts in the little safe about $800 worth of narcotic drugs for the daily trade.

WORTH MANY TIMES $800.

Police believe there was a confederate who knew the store and could obtain access. Nobody heard the explosion, although watchmen are kept in the Brewer building day and night.

Manager Gordon Whittaker discovered the break when he entered the store to run over his books.

While store valuation of the loot is only $800, it is affirmed by officers who know the "cokeys" and their insane appetites, that peddlers can run this up to many thousands, selling the goods at fantastic prices by the "shot."

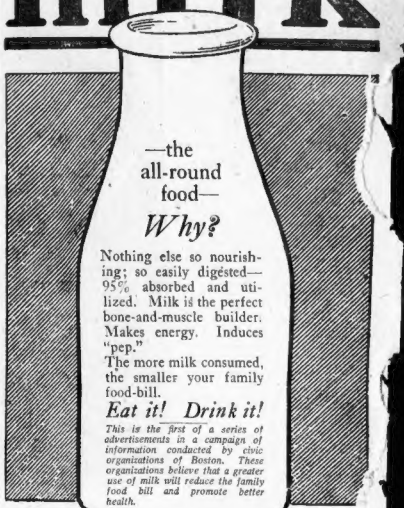
milk



—the all-round food—

Why?

Nothing else so nourishing; so easily digested—95% absorbed and utilized. Milk is the perfect bone-and-muscle builder. Makes energy. Induces "pep."

The more milk consumed, the smaller your family food-bill.

Eat it! Drink it!

This is the first of a series of advertisements in a campaign of information conducted by civic organizations of Boston. These organizations believe that a greater use of milk will reduce the family food bill and promote better health.

"Good deeds an' good tobacco need time to ripen. Yo' can't set the world right without a heap o' patience."

Velvet Joe.

Friend—do you know—

that tobacco really "ripens" after it is brought from the fields Therefore, the method of "ripening" and "curing" tobacco has much to do with its pipe qualities.

Just note these VELVET facts:

First, only the choicest, silkiest leaves of Kentucky Burley are used for VELVET.

Second, these are stored away in wooden hogsheads for two years of patient ageing.

Third, this is the slow, expensive way, but the right way to take out the bite. Nature makes the tobacco mellow and "friendly" as no "short-cut" method can.

Now you know why it's mighty hard to carry a "grouch" and a pipe of friendly VELVET at the same time.

FEELS HER ART FLAME INTO VERSES

And Sculptress Boyle, Soon to Get Divorce, Proves It With a Poem

New York, May 26—Sculptress Gerade Boyle, wife of Takeshi Kanno, artist protege of Joaquin Miller, who is about to be freed by her husband she may wed Yeitaro Ishigaki, Kanno's pupil, explained matters today.

She was married to Kanno on the coast in 1908.

"When one dares to be true to herself," said she, "what a wonderful vista opens up a world where everything abides by a law born from itself, all fitting into a beautiful mosaic court of the universe.

"The great artists are souls capable of rising above the common level of blind obedience to man-made law, insipid conformity to convention, and able to chisel and hew their way through the world of things, blazing a trail through the wilderness of thought, of conflicting ideas, untrammeled emotions; who dare ignore, trample under foot if need be, the obstacles in their way, the barriers that hold the masses back, using man made laws only when it be to their advantage to do so, boldly breaking them when they retard their progress, their passage of self, check their freedom of expression, their cosmic will to live, to be."

"Sometimes," she said, "the art that breathes in me flames forth in verse, sometimes in brush and pencil, sometimes in clay."

She snatched a pencil and in a few minutes had written the following:

Hate not retard my passage!
Hide, ghosts, phantoms of society and law.
As I walk through you,
I trample you down!
In my being stirs the rage, the righteous wrath of the mighty souls of souls you have oppressed.
In through the ages of civilization.

She showed this poem as expressive of her purpose in seeking out Japanese.

I greet you!
of the West greet you!
stretch my hand vibrating with the pulse
of the Far East,
you of the Mystic East!
Of laws that condemn the woman who lives with a man not her husband, she had this to say:
Hand cringers to brute force!
Battered receptacles of passion's dregs!
When will your dull minds awake
To the glad right of choice?

Then she said in prose, though the utterance might easily be cut up into verse libre:

"I have passed unmolested the hands at the imaginary posts of duty and have entered unharmed the forbidden fortress of the soul of truth, beauty, love—life.

"Must we be shadowed by this non-sperm conservatism, owned by sepulchral monsters of outgrown moni

MRS. FRIEND, ACCUSER OF BROKER-HUSBAND

Mrs. Frances Niver Friend.

BROKER FRIEND IS ACCUSED AS DESERTER

Back From West on Wife's Complaint; Hearing in June

Boston acquaintances of Archer D. Friend, former broker of this city, and Frances Niver Friend, the wife from whom he is separated, are awaiting with much interest the outcome of Mrs. Friend's charge of desertion, which will be heard on Saturday, June 7, in the Newton Court.

In a preliminary hearing on Saturday Mrs. Friend testified against her husband. The case has already attracted much attention, extending as it has across an entire continent. The Friends were married in 1900 and have two sons, Dana Alden, seventeen, and Francis Stuart, nine. Friend was a broker connected with Blodget & Co., No. 60 State street. The couple have lived in Brookline, Winchester, Gloucester and Newton. Mrs. Friend testified that her husband left her several times, and that he brought suit for divorce in 1915, charging cruelty. An agreement was reached whereby he was to pay her $2,500 a year. This was later doubled by the courts, on evidence that Friend had drawn a salary of $16,000 and had withdrawn $185,000 as his share of the business.

He went West, and she learned that he had started divorce proceedings in Reno, Nev.

SCIENCE CASE GOES OVER FOR WEEK

Judge Dodge to Hear Two Suits Involving Church and Publishing Company

Frederic Dodge, a former Judge of the Circuit Court of the United States, was to have begun today hearings in the Christian Science litigation, but ex-Governor Bates, for the directors of the church was unable to appear, and the case went over until Tuesday of next week.

Mr. Dodge was appointed by Judge Loring of the Supreme Court as master to hear and report the facts involved in the controversy, and it is expected that to present the evidence will require from five to six weeks, and possibly longer.

There are 14o suits which will come before Judge Dodge. One is brought by the trustees of the Christian Science Publishing Company seeking to have the directors of the church enjoined from interfering with their management of affairs.

The trustees claim exclusive jurisdiction over the business of publishing the doctrines of Mrs. Mary G. Baker Eddy, while the directors contend that power is vested in them to control every branch of the church. The construction of two deeds of trust by Mrs. Eddy, one creating the trustees of the publishing company and the other the directors of the church, will have to be interpreted by the court and the powers and duties of the two boards defined.

Sergt. Joseph Fay of Medford Awarded Hero's Cross

New York, May 26—Platoon Sergeant Joseph Fay, of the 311th Regiment, and of Medford, Mass., who returned today from France, won the distinguished service cross at St. Mihiel September 26. He and Captain D. A. Colonna and fifty-eight men of a platoon early in the morning reached their objective. Five hours later pressure on a flank caused the regiment to withdraw. The platoon, however, got caught in a barrage and was cut off. Only eight men were unwounded.

Towards evening, after fighting the Germans all day, the remaining men of the platoon picked up their wounded and could not walk and fought their way to their own lines. Sergeant Fay commanded the platoon on its return.

FINED $10 ON REVERE BEACH LIQUOR CHARGE

Elmer F. Williams of Albion street, Boston, was fined $10 today in the Chelsea District Court on the charge of having intoxicating liquor in his possession on the Revere Beach boulevard. Lieutenant Addison A. Alberts and an officer in his made the arrest. Alberts testified that they smelled whisky on the breath of two other companions of Williams, but detected no odor on his. Williams said he had had several drinks, while both the sailors asserted they had taken none.

WILSON MESSAGE TO JANE ADDAMS EXPLAINED

President Champion of Women and Children; Not for Easier Peace Terms

Washington, May 26—President Wilson is "quite willing to stand for any criticism of his attitude in behalf of women and children."

This statement was contained in a cablegram from the President received at the executive offices of the White House today in reply to a message stating that there was considerable criticism in this country of his recent telegram to Miss Jane Addams, at the International Women's Conference in Switzerland.

There has been a general misunderstanding with regard to the President's note to Miss Addams, it was stated by White House officials.

His message expressing sympathy with a recommendation of the meeting was in reply to a message from Miss Addams urging that the blockade on Germany be modified, and not, as reported, urging more lenient peace terms. White House officials said.

From the President's cablegram today officials pointed out it was apparent that he was not aware that there had been any doubt as to the nature of Miss Addams' communication.

NEW BUILDINGS URGED BY WOODWARD

Boston Commissioner of Health Praises American's "Build Now" Campaign

"There seems to be an unsatisfied demand for modern buildings, which so far as I can see can be met only by new buildings," said Dr. William C. Woodward, Boston Commissioner of Health, in praising the American's BUILD NOW campaign.

"The observations of this department show that such houses and apartments as are idle are of types that no longer satisfy the public, and that houses of a type that does satisfy the public are inadequate to meet the demand.

"The people have been educated during the war to expect sanitary and convenient homes, and the war wages have enabled them, notwithstanding the high cost of living, to provide themselves with such homes. It is not likely that the people will be willing ever again to return to more primitive conditions.

"Some of the older buildings that are idle might be modeled to conform to the present standards, but a great many of them are not susceptible of being so improved. Even those that can be so improved can be altered probably only at costs that are prohibitive, and it would be cheaper to destroy the buildings and begin over again than to undertake to remodel it.

"It is, of course, needless to urge the importance of sanitary and comfortable homes for the protection and upbuilding of health and for the promotion of family life. These results of sanitation and convenience are too patent to need discussion."

BOOM WELL ON WAY.

A general improvement in building conditions has developed in Boston in the past fortnight, and inquiries of prospective builders are reaching architects and contractors in Boston in larger numbers than they had expected would be the case at this time. The feeling of building activity has prompted the belief that the looked for building boom will be well on its way during the present month.

S. W. Leighton of the contracting firm of Leighton-Mitchell, with offices at No. 30 Milk street, views the building situation with optimism. He is one of many interested in building construction who believe that the public in general has come to realize that to build now is a safe investment, and that it is useless to wait in the expectancy of lowering prices.

"We have more work in hand than we had at this time last year," Mr. Leighton said, "and the past fortnight has shown a decided improvement. I look for a big building boom to reach these sections by the middle of summer at latest. The people realize that if they want new buildings they have simply got to build.

"A great many people have been holding off building now in the hope of a big drop in prices of building materials. It is almost certain that prices will not drop. Certain materials may trend slightly downward, but the decline will not be considerable enough to warrant waiting. There is no reason why we should not go ahead and Build Now. I should say that the public could not take better advice than the American is giving them to Build Now.

NO DECREASE LIKELY.

"Copper, steel and lumber are high but in no degree as high priced as other commodities and so far as I can see there is no likelihood of their dropping in price."

Jeremiah J. Caddigan of the construction company of that name with offices at No. 27 School street is another builder who feels that now is the time to build.

"It is a fact that the fellow who builds now will have the jump on the other fellow, for without doubt we are about to see a great deal of building down. We are on the verge of a boom, and when it comes there will not be enough labor or contractors to meet all demands. The result will be that prices will be higher instead of lower so that the best advice is 'build now.'"

George L. Donaher, architect, connected with the Caddigan Company, also is enthusiastic about the build now campaign.

CIRCUS COMES TO TOWN WITH NEW WONDERS

Sells-Floto Show Pitches "Big Top" on Old Ball Grounds

Whoop 'er up!

And whoops three times three!

For the circus is in town, the Sells-Floto Circus right here in little old Boston. And the big jamboree starts off this afternoon at two and at eight o'clock this evening, and continues every afternoon and evening for a week, on the old Huntington avenue ball grounds, opposite the Boston Opera House.

Late in reaching the Hub after the long journey from Montreal, the two trains of thirty-four cars bearing all the wonders of the Sells-Floto aggregation lost no time in unloading from the B and A yards at Huntington avenue. Crowds of men and boys, mostly boys of course, and a good many women, stood by from early afternoon until the cars bearing the units of the great big circus put in an appearance to the cries of "Here she comes!"

BILLY SUNDAY PRISKY.

And even the thunder showers and the belated arrival did not dampen enthusiasm or dispel "that circusy feeling" of those who waited. But to make up for lost time, ladies and gentlemen, Boyville and Maryville had their innings today. Hush—the big parade—mile long—no less. See for yourself—crowds, thrills, clowns, the long thin fellow and the little fat fellow, the elephants, the big hockety rhinoceros, the lions, tigers and camels n' everything. Gee, an' if they ever got away. That little shorty elephant, he's some frisky. And his name is Billy Sunday.

Billy Sunday christened him himself. That was the time the real Billy Sunday tied up with the Sells-Floto circus for two days and lived like a regular circus fellow, and never preached a word, not a word, although he ate with the circus people and never called anyone down, no not once. And now the grotesque "Billy Sunday," the littlest mammoth elephant, has a place all to himself where the real Billy Sunday not long ago made a whole lot of Bostonians and their neighbors hit the sawdust trail.

KEEPS KIDS GUESSING.

Sights aplenty to keep the kiddoung and old—guessing, as the big parade was scheduled to swing down Huntington avenue, to Massachusetts to Columbus avenues, to Elliot street, to Tremont, Park, Beacon, Charles, Boylston streets and return "home." In it were the emblasoned wagons, the racing chariots, the gilded chariots, tableau cars, baggage "horses," the beautifully limbed, arch-necked stock, the ponies and even the group of pony burros, with comedy fairly oozing from their ears to their hee-haw teeth.

And also a bunch of animals that looked like enough to warrant waiting and what the wise ones called "heyneys." All real circus and kiddom revelled in. Long roaring from the depths of covered and unapproachable cages. The Sells-Floto band, a little regiment of its own, where everything and everybody has its or his proper place. The cook tent outfits which furnishes the "eats," all cooked and served on the ground right behind the "big top" canvas containing the three rings, is in itself an army commissary.

CARPENTERS ARE CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

Will Return to Work Soon on New Scale, Declares Secretary

It is expected that the 1,600 mill carpenters, who went out on strike today to enforce their demand for a wage of $1 an hour, will be back on their jobs within three or four days and on the new wage scale.

This is the opinion expressed today by Joseph P. Twomey, secretary of the District Carpenters' Council, at his office, No. 30 Hanover street.

He also denied a report that "an investigating committee of the Building Trades Employers' Association found only a few instances, and these in emergency jobs, where carpenters were receiving more than their old wage of 75 cents an hour."

"There is little or no truth in that statement," said Secretary Twomey. "All men placed by us are getting $1 an hour. As to the nature of the jobs, we admit that none of them are big. They are all small jobs because of the small amount of construction work during the war. The men are scattered in small groups."

He cited instances where about eighty men were employed in a building on State street. "To all appearances," he said, "it looks as if no one was working there. But they are, and overtime, too, at double pay.

The Ginter Company is one of the latest employers to sign up to the union demands. "They will employ all their carpenters through the union," Twomey stated.

Punish Great Lakes Sailors Who Sing Red Anthems

Chicago, May 26.—Displaying the red flag and singing Bolshevik songs at an entertainment for the Fifteenth Regiment at the Great Lakes Training Station, caused an investigation that resulted in 500 men being detached and sent to other stations as punishment.

The men ordered transferred are flying corps machinists, veterans of overseas service. They will go to Hampton Roads and other Atlantic seaboard points. The order for the transfer and the reason was announced yesterday.

Dissatisfaction because of tardiness in granting discharges was said to have been responsible for the demonstration.

MEMORIAL TABLET TO SOLDIERS DEDICATED

"DIVVIES" WITH FIRM BY ROBBING CASH REGISTER

Boston, May 26.—An employe who robbed the cash register of a big local firm of several thousand marks left a note in the cash drawer on which he had written:

"That is my commission. The time has come to divvy up."

A Mother Wrote This:—

"A few years ago I weighed less than one hundred pounds. I took Father John's Medicine faithfully for a little over two years and now weigh one hundred and forty pounds, and do not recall that I have been as well in my lifetime. I attribute it all to Father John's Medicine."

This statement is given voluntarily for the benefit it may be to others. The name and address will be given on request.

For a period of over 60 years Father John's Medicine has been building up an army of word-of-mouth advertisers who tell their friends of the benefits received from this old fashioned pure and wholesome food medicine. For over 60 years it has proved its value as a safe family medicine. Guaranteed free from alcohol.

FULLERTON TELLS HOW TO BE FIRST BASEMAN

THIS is the first of a series of 100 articles by Hugh S. Fullerton, celebrated expert, on "How to Play Baseball." In this lesson Mr. Fullerton tells the proper way to play first base. These articles will be a feature of the American sport pages. Don't miss them.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

First base, in the old days of baseball, was the sinecure of the team, but with the development of modern play, especially of the hit and run and hitting to right field with runners on bases, it has become one of the most important positions.

Not only must the first baseman be a good catcher of thrown balls, either high or low, an excellent judge of speed of runners, but in the modern team he must cover more than half as much ground as the second baseman or shortstop.

The positions of the first baseman are three in number—his position for receiving thrown balls, that for fielding when no one is on the bases, and his position on the base when holding up runners, which differs from his "free" position in that, in such cases, he is doubly handicapped.

With no one on bases the first baseman plays deep behind the base, the distance depending upon his own speed and ability to reach the base after the ball is hit.

For left-handed hitters, his position should be from thirty to forty feet back of the bag and eight feet or less inside the base line.

For right field right-handed hitters he should play from twenty-five to thirty feet back of the base and fifteen to eighteen feet inside the line. The further a first baseman can play inside the foul line, with safety to his team and certainty of reaching the bag in time, the greater assistance he is to the second baseman, who can move two feet nearer second base to every foot the first baseman can move toward him, thus doubly closing the infield gaps.

Remember that the first baseman must get to the base as quickly as possible after a ball is hit. This is important because the other infielders are aided immensely if they see him when making hurried throws, as it furnishes them a mark at which to throw and gives them more confidence than when they throw at the bag with the first baseman running toward it.

The great importance of a first baseman in defence lies in the aid and confidence he gives the other infielders. The first baseman should not play too deep to make his arrival at the base coincident with that of the ball. The best players reach the base ahead of the ball, set themselves in position inside of the base and avoid possibility of a collision with the runner.

If they make a quick start, which is essential in fielding the bag, they can direct the throw by furnishing the thrower with a target. Nothing inspires a shortstop or third baseman to such confidence as to see such a target and to know that the first baseman is in position to catch any ball thrown within five feet of the base in either direction.

FRED MITCHELL IN TOWN WITH HIS CUBS

Braves, Back on Stride, Out to Give Champions Warm Welcome—Rudolph on Mound

The new spirit that Hammering Harry Gowdy injected into the Braves is expected by all members of the Tribe to work wonders from now out.

The old kick and confidence stuck out a mile Saturday. It was as plain as an ink spot on a dress shirt that Hank brought along just the psychological whatever-it-was that the team needed.

Wherefore Gowdy, though a bit stiff and sore after his first game, is likely to be worked with much regularity right along. He has the nerve and color that stire things up, and is apparently as good a backstop as ever.

Though Nehf was unusually fast all through Saturday's game, Hank hadn't any trouble hanging onto the ball, and dropped just one pitch.

His arm in practice looked as good as ever, too, as Barry and Rice Red dared to try a steal. The team looked entirely made over, something like the machine that was predicted during the Spring trip. Even Manager Stallings is optimistic now. Bearken:

HAPPY IS STALLINGS.

"You can tell the world I have the best baseball club right now I've had in five years. No team in the world ever had such a crazy run of bad breaks. Every mistake we've made has cost us a game, while the other fellows have got away with almost anything.

"But the gloom has been wiped out. The confidence was back in there Saturday, and all hands were hustling. You could see that in the fielding and hitting. For practically the first time this season the blows came when they were needed.

"We haven't tried to alibi, and we've been working hard, and now it looks as if the light were ahead. Even if we don't get any other stars, we have been good to pretty good all up in the race with as things stand."

There was no line drill this morning, and, in like fashion, were most of his athletes feeling and talking. No Braves Field this week should be a much more cheerful place than it has been for some time back.

The Braves didn't make the run down to Newport for a game yesterday owing to the rain. Bill James was carded to pitch. His whip is in pretty good shape and he may be seen in action during the week.

CHAMPIONS IN TOWN.

The champion Cubs were with us today, and their title hasn't frightened many ball clubs thus far. Fred Mitchell & Co. have had a very disastrous jaunt through the east. The team has been in somewhat the state of the Braves—not hitting to the pinches.

It was here last year that the Cubs chopped off four in a row and then proceeded to march straight on to the pennant. But if the Braves play as they can, and did Saturday, three straights there may be, but on a different side of the ledger.

Little Mister Rudolph was to hurl this P. M., while Hendrix or Tyler were on the hostile mess. Ty has been having bother with his wing, but reported it today as back in flinging shape.

BASEBALL NEWS AND GOSSIP

Big Bill James, who has been purchased by the Red Sox, looked like a real comeback with the Tigers early in the Spring. He had great speed and curves, but was lacking only in control.

Sherrod Smith celebrated his return to the Dodger tribe by blanking the Pirates with three hits. Looks as if big sojourn in khaki hadn't slowed up his wing a little bit.

Hughie Jennings is apparently off. He gathered his fifth straight, from the Athletics, and with his bunch of sluggers all he needs is fair pitching to be up there very shortly.

Walter Johnson lost another by weakening late in the game, a habit he has this season. The White Sox jumped on him for three runs in the eighth and nosed out, 4 to 3.

The first triple play of the season saved the day for the White Sox. It ended a rally, eleven inning also, in which the Reds had scored three. The play [illegible] Felsch to Risberg to Weaver [illegible] to Eddie Collins.

President Herdler of the National League, who was over the Rowdy Day, declares that Grover Alexander apparently has all his sour, but isn't any too lucky. It was by the way, a very diplomatic and pleasing visit on the part of the new executive.

Cassey, McGraw's pitching "ace," won his sixth straight by holding the Cards to two littles blows. He has certainly been a life saver for the Giants. Mike Cometsie, incidentally, did the catching.

A miscue by Pipp and Dutch Gerber's timely hit cost the Yankees the opener in St. Louis.

The Tigers will move ahead of the Red Sox if yesterday's happenings are repeated. Washington, too, can move into a tie with the Barrowites for the six-seven spots if they win and the Sox lose another.

* * *

Konetchy turned in nineteen putouts on first in the matinee with the Pirates and only the regulation nine innings were played. The Big Train smashed out a two-bagger, sending over one run, and nosed over another on a sacrifice fly.

Rigler Says Hank Was Nervous in Early Innings

By UMPIRE RIGLER

The ovation Boston fandom gave Hank Gowdy Saturday was one of the greatest ever accorded a baseball player.

I have officiated at a lot of other big days, and taken part in my share of the world's series battles, but the cheering Hero Hank got eclipsed any I ever heard before.

Hank was a trifle nervous behind the bat for a couple of innings and fought about every other ball Nehf served up. But once the nervousness disappeared Hank was just as good and as steady as he was in 1914, his big year.

LARRY GARDNER HAS REVENGE ON BARROW

His Two Timely Belts off Mays Beats Red Sox in Opener, 3-2—Ruth Back in Left

Cleveland, May 26.—Larry Gardner may be old, as ball players go, and decrepit, if some fans will, but if the Boston Red Sox have any more like him that they want to unload on the Indians, even if he did come to this man's town by way of Philadelphia, be it known here and now Cleveland fans will welcome him with open arms.

We don't know whether Larry harbored any ill will against the Red Sox which he hooked up with the Athletics last Spring. But it's a certainty he couldn't have swallowed the bitter dose of going from a team that appeared to have a chance to win the pennant and world's championship to an avowed tailender without having it taste bitter.

AUTHOR OF EVERY RUN.

Gardner came to bat four times. On three occasions he cracked out fine singles. His first ashe blow drove in two of his mates and tied the score, while his third sent the winning run across in the eighth, the final score being 3-2.

The "in between" hit didn't count for anything, as Larry was caught stealing. On his trip to the plate, Gardner gave Gilhooley an opportunity to bask in the calcium rays with a driving catch that had all the earmarks of a double when it left the bat.

The Red Sox topped on Bagby for a run in the first on Gilhooley's safe bunt, Vitt's sacrifice, Strunk's infield out and Ruh's single. Scott's single in the second was followed by two force plays and then Gilhooley and Vitt singled, scoring Mays.

FOHLS GET TO MAYS.

The Indians tied up in the third on Bagby's single, a force out at second, Chapman's single, a pass to Smith, after Speaker grounded to McInnis, and Gardner's line single to left.

Two were gone in the eighth when Smith was safe on Barry's fumble, stole second and scampered across on Gardner's hot bounder to Mays.

A crowd of 21,000 turned out for the matinee. It being the first real baseball weather that has visited Cleveland to date.

Joe Wood, Frolic Boy Morton and Sam Jones were down to be the opposing pitcher.

ANYTHING
BY DAMON RUNYON

THE FATAL SIXTH

(Dedicated to J. K., W. P., M. B., and All the Rest.)

THERE was a heavy frown on his forehead,
Under his battered hat,
As I made the suggeese past his baggy knees
To the car seat where he sat.
"How am I doing, Mister?
Why I couldn't be better fixed—
I'd a-beat this card, and beat 'er hard,
If it hadn't been for the Sixth!"

There was a well-thumbed card in his fingers,
'Twas covered with pencil marks—
Queer looking knots, and queerer dots,
Familiar, no doubt, to the sharks.
And this is the tale he told me—
His emotions were somewhat mixed:
"I'd be rich today on the strength of my play,
If it hadn't been for the Sixth!

"Why, look at this first one, Mister—
The price is seven to one—
And I win from Shaw a good-sized taw
On this thing called Setting Sun.
And what do I do in the second?
Why I lick Tom until he cries;
The third I play with Billy Hayes,
And Billy, he almost dies!

"Maxey's my meat for the fourth one—
Elmer, he gives me that;
Wins in a walk, and it makes some talk,"
He've fingered his battered hat.
Fingered his hat for a moment,
And smoothed out his baggy knees—
"What do I do with this Gingerbread Sue
In the fifth? Why, that is a breeze!

"Had 'em all frightened, Mister;
Blond won't bet me a cent;
Whitey is cold, and scorns my gold,
And Gloomy is badly bent.
But I sent 'er all in on the last one—
Ryan's may man this time;
They beat me a snout with that bum, Just About—
Mister, please lend me a dime!"

There was a well-thumbed card in his fingers,
And he studied each pencil mark,
As he says: "These rings mark five good things
For tomorrow at Belmont Park.
I'll get 'em tomorrow, Mister—
Five of 'em surely fixed—
But I'm here to tell I'm worried like hell
To know what to play in the Sixth!"

POOCH DONOVAN HAS HARVARD AT ITS BEST

Encouraged by the success of their track team in defeating Princeton Saturday, undergraduate Harvard is picking the Crimson to win the Intercollegiate title when athletes representing twenty-two colleges meet in the Stadium Friday and Saturday.

Harvard men can see nobody else for the sprints but Captain Billie Moore, and they argue that his two first places will start the team out with ten points. Henry Flower is being picked for second in the "100," another four points for the Crimson.

In the "440" Harvard will probably not get better than a fourth or fifth, but Ned Gourdin is showing form enough to get points in this event.

First place is being conceded to Frank Shea, Pittsburgh's captain, who won the title last year in faster time than anybody has covered the distance this year.

In the half mile, Dennis O'Connell is Harvard's favorite for second place, and all forecasts gives the Dorchester boy some points at least, providing Pooch Donovan starts him in this event.

O'CONNELL AT HIS BEST.

O'Connell's spectacular running against Val Raymond of Princeton, Saturday, has made him a Harvard favorite for the mile title. Raymond led until the last furlong, when O'Connell bumped himself and won by ten yards.

The Crimson expects to find the hurdle field, with Erdman and Trowbridge of Princeton, Johnson of Michigan, Smith of Cornell and Mayhew of Bowdoin, enough to shut out Krogness and Tracy. So Harvard is not figuring on any points in these events.

With McCullough of Princeton, Waterman of Yale, Captain Sedgwick of Michigan, Relles of Dartmouth, and Captain Dresser of Cornell, the title-holder, performing, Harvard will be lucky to land Hutchinson in fifth place, and the chances are the Cantabrigians will have no material gain when the results of this event are announced.

KROGNESS MAY BE SURPRISE.

While Johnson of Michigan, may win the broad jump, as he does 23 feet consistently, Harvard hopes that Krogness, Flower and Gourdin, will place among the first five, and expect at least six points in this event.

In the running high jump, Krogness has an outside chance for first place, but if Landon of Yale wins, the Harvard crack appears reasonably certain of landing in second.

In the hammer throw, Harvard stands a very poor show, unless Stevens beats all his former marks. The same holds good in the shot put, although Tubby Clark may squeeze in third or fourth.

In the pole vault, Bob Harwood should be up among the leaders, but he will have to better his marks in competition to shake the also-rans.

WILL BE 881 ATHLETES.

More than 1,012 entries have been received for the games. They include 881 athletes. This is the largest number of competitors, while Harvard, with 42, ranks fifth. The other colleges, together with the number of their men, follow:

Yale, 58; Cornell, 52; Princeton, 48; Pennsylvania, 37; Pittsburgh, 36; Johns Hopkins, 24; Lafayette, 22; Michigan, 21; Fordham, 20; Columbia, 19; Swarthmore, 11; Amherst, 11; New York University, 10; Syracuse, 10; Rutgers, 9; Bowdoin, 8; Georgetown, 6; Maine, 6; and Haverford, 3.

The half-mile has the largest number of competitors, the total being 104. There are 103 entered in the 100, 220 and 440-yard runs.

BOXING NEWS AND GOSSIP

K. O. Mara, Cincinnati lightweight, will force Frankie (Young) Britt of New Bedford to show at his best tomorrow night at the Armory A. A. if that worthy is to resume his sightseeing along Victory Trail. In his bout at the Triple-A against Ralph Brady of Syracuse, Mara displayed enough class to secure recognition in the most select pugilistic circles.

Johnny Noonan, Dorchester lightweight, was obliged to stop fighting in his contest with Dan McCormack at the Commercial A. C. last Friday night as a result of a small vein bursting in the head when he collided with his opponent. It was twenty minutes before the flow of blood could be stopped.

Noonan rightfully considers McCormack's win a fluke and would like to get another bout with him. The Dorchester lightweight says he was in fine condition for the tilt and would have finished in front if it had not been for the unfortunate accident which made it necessary for him to quit.

Young Abearn is busily engaged getting into condition for his twelve-round bout with Jack Britton, welterweight champion, which will be staged at the Crescent A. C. of Lowell Friday night. It is the first time Britton has signed for engagement in a New England ring since he won back his title by knockout from Ted (Kid) Lewis.

Young Dyson, New Bedford banamweight, has gone to Marlboro to prepare for his fifteen-round tussle with Barney Snyder of Roxbury, which will be held before the Driving Club Thursday night. Snyder will engage in his final workouts at Natick.

Buffalo experts gave Tom Cowler credit with having had a slight shade on Joe Jeannette, burly brunette, in their ten-rounder last Friday night. The weights were: Cowler, 215; Jeannette, 206.

BROOKS ON WITH GEORGE ALGER AT FENWAY

RINGSIDE'S SELECTIONS.

Tommy Reagan to beat Young Sacco.

George Alger to beat Terry Brooks.

Tony Marengo to beat Johnny Veto.

Freddie Madden to beat Dutch Reagan.

By RINGSIDE

Terry Brooks, the West End youth who carries around a couple of six-inch guns in each of his boxing gloves, and George Alger, Cambridge welterweight, will try to settle their ring differences when they clash in a ten-round bout at the Fenway A. A. tonight.

Their frolic will be part of an all-star show. There is another ten-round encounter on the program, while two eight-round contests will also be held.

Brooks and Alger recently met at the Fenway A. A. For five rounds Alger riddled his opponent with left and right hand jolts. Battering Terrance then opened up one of Alger's eyes, which made it impossible for the Cambridge veteran to do much more effective work. The result was Brooks had a decided margin in the closing frames of the scrap.

Referee Henry Meyers gave the decision to Brooks. The referee did not meet with the approval of the fans, who were of the opinion that Alger was entitled to at least a draw as a result of his fine work in the early sessions.

Tommy Reagan, nifty East Boston lightweight, will oppose Young Sacco of the same district, in the other ten-round engagement. These boys are keen rivals and it is expected they will furnish a lively tilt.

Dutch Reagan, a brother of Tommy, will be one of the principals in the first eight-round until. He will be opposed by Freddie Madden of East Boston. The latter has been performing at a lively clip of late and believes he will be able to add Reagan to his list of victims.

The other eight-round bouts will bring together Johnny Veto and Tony Marengo, both boys are willing workers and sweet punchers. As a result, the contest may have an abrupt ending.

The Wakefield A. A. holds its last boxing show of the season tonight in Curley's Hall, Wakefield. The card: Young Dufour of Reading vs. Fred Marchetti of Woburn, four rounds.

Al Alger of Wakefield vs. Tommy Fallon of Lawrence, six rounds.

Young Duffy of Wakefield vs. Billy Madden of Andover, six rounds.

Young Leonard of Chelsea vs. Joe Delmont of Lawrence, six rounds.

KRAMER TOO FAST FOR GOULET IN BIG RACE

Newark, N. J., May 26. — Frank Kramer easily defeated Alfred Goulet in two straight heats of a mile match race at the Velodrome yesterday.

Willie Spencer beat Eddie Madden in two heats of another mile match. Madden came back strong and took the five-mile open from a big field, with Grenda second, Hatcher third, Goulet fourth, and Menus Bedell fifth. Thirty-five started in this race and only ten finished.

Raymond Eaton won the two-thirds mile handicap from Tommy Smith.

ALLIED LEAGUE CALLS MEETING IN BOSTON

The Allied Veteran Baseball League holds its schedule meeting at the Quincy House tomorrow night. Boston, Providence, Brooklyn, Montreal, Toronto, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Newark form the circuit and will be represented either in person or by proxy.

YALE PICKS NEW CREW TO ROW HARVARD

New Haven, Ct., May 26. — Dr. Maitner Abbott, Yale crew coach, today picked a brand-new 'varsity crew for the four-mile race with Harvard.

Instead of shaking up the 'varsity generally, as he has done twice in ten days, he coolly selected the second eight as the 'varsity, telling the regulars that they were from then on the reserves, and would row the second eight race against Harvard for two miles, instead of the four-mile event against the Crimson regulars as they had expected to do.

Professor Abbott based his decision on the outcome of the four-mile time trial last Friday, in which the second eight defeated the 'rst by several lengths.

It was the first attempt of the two eights to cover the four miles this season under the watch, and it revealed unexpected strengths in the second and surprising weakness in the 'rst shell.

The head coach decided that the simplest way to select the final octette which will race Harvard would be to promote the second generally and to make such changes as seem desirable later.

The make-up of the regulars, as they began the last week of their final training on home waters for the Harvard regatta was as follows:

Stroke, Peters; No. 7, Driscoll; No. 6, Payson; No. 5, Captain Mead; No. 4, Schiefflin; No. 3, Adams; No. 2, Hord; bow, Hare; coxswain, Pashar.

Little doubt is now felt that Peters will be the final selection as varsity stroke. Soderston, Schieffelin, Hemingway, Lawrence and Schreiber all having been tried and found equal to the task of driving the sight at top-notch speed. Schreiber was the last to be tested.

HOW CREW SHAPES UP.

He was assigned the stroke oar role Friday, for varsity and his crew failed to respond when called upon for the final drive.

The selection of a stroke for the second boat is uncertain, but Dr. Abbott may today give Hemingway another chance. That oarsman was taken from the 'varsity shell two months ago because of an attack of influenza.

READY FOR GALES FERRY TRIP.

Schreiber is likely, however, to get placed in the 'varsity eight, as he is one of the strongest oarsmen of the squad.

Orders were today given the Yale squad to prepare for their annual trip to the training quarters at Gales Ferry, on the Thames.

They will leave this city next Sunday, being given an outing on Professor Abbott's schooner for the day, making the trip on Long Island Sound before nightfall and arriving in time for dinner.

The entire squad of twenty-five oarsmen will be taken and the quarters at Gales Ferry are being put in shape this week for the reception of the party.

The plan of quartering the Yale and Harvard squads together has been abandoned, principally because of lack of room. The Harvard squad will be engaged in the former quarters in the vicinity of Red Top once more.

WHARTON NAMED PENN'S FIELD ATHLETIC MENTOR

Philadelphia, May 26.—Dr. R. Tait McKenzie, director of the department of physical education at the University of Pennsylvania, announced that he has appointed Dr. Charles M. Lawson Robertson, track coach, was appointed instructor of athletics. He will act as instructor in all classes in track and field athletics, including cross-country running.

A Kissless People

THE Maori women of New Zealand know nothing about kissing. Nose-rubbing is their form of salutation, and when two friends meet they hold each other by the hands, bend their heads until their noses touch, and then rub them gently from side to side. This form of greeting is not confined to the women, but is practiced by the men.

THE DARK STAR

THRILLING ROMANCE OF AN AMERICAN GIRL

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Together.

Copyright, 1917, by Robert W. Chambers

He sat there, holding the letter and looking absently over it at the little dog who had gone to sleep again. There was no sound in the room save the faint whisper of the tea-kettle. The sunny garden outside was very still, too; the hookbird appeared to doze on his perch twig; the kitten had settled down with eyes half closed and tail looked under flank.

The young man sat there with his letter in his hand and eyes lost in retrospection for a while.

In his hand lay evidence that the thing which had followed him, and through which he no longer doubted that he had been robbed, was now in Paris.

And yet he could not give this information to Princess Naia. Here was a letter which he could not show. Something within him forbade it, some instinct which he did not trouble to analyze.

And this instinct sent the letter into his breast pocket as a light sound came to his ears; and the next instant Rue Carew entered the further drawing-room.

The little West Highland terrier looked up, wagged that section of him which did duty as a tail, and watched her as Neeland rose to greet her at the tea-table.

"Sandy," she said to the little dog, "if you care to say 'Down with the Sultan,' I shall bestow one lump of sugar upon you."

"Yap-yap!" said the little dog.

"Give it to him, please——" Rue handed the sugar to Neeland, who delivered it gravely.

"That's because I want Sandy to like you," she added.

Neeland regarded the little dog and addressed him politely:

"I shouldn't dare call you Sandy on such brief acquaintance," he said; "but may I salute you as Alexander? Thank you, Alexander."

He greeted the dog, whose tail made a slight sketchy motion of appreciation.

"Now," said Rue Carew, "you are friends, and we shall be very happy together, I'm sure. . . . Princess Naia said we were not to wait. Tell me how to fix your tea."

He explained. About to begin on a buttered croissant, he ate it abruptly and rose to receive the Princess, who entered with a light, springy step characteristic of her, gowned in one of those Parisian afternoon creations which one never sees outside that capital, and never will be.

"Far too charming to be real," murmured Neeland. "You are a pretty fairy story, Princess Naia, and your gown is a miracle tale which never was true."

Neeland Blushed

He had not dared any such flippancy with Rue Carew, and the girl, who knew she was exquisitely gowned, felt an odd pang in her heart as this young man's praise of the Princess Mistchenka fell so easily and gaily from his lips. He might have noticed her gown, as it had been chosen with many doubts, much hesitation, and anxious consideration, for him.

She flushed a little at the momentary trace of envy: "You are far too lovely for words," she said, rising. But the Princess gently forced her to resume her seat.

"If this young man has any discrimination," she said, "he won't hesitate with the golden apple, Ruhannah."

Rue laughed and flushed.

"He hasn't noticed my gown, and I wore it for him to notice," she said. "But he was too deeply interested in Sandy and in tea and croissants——"

"I did notice it!" said Neeland. And, to that young man's surprise and annoyance, his face grew hot with embarrassment. What on earth possessed him to blush like a play-boy! He suddenly felt like one, too, and turned sharply to the little dog, perplexed, irritated with himself and his behaviour.

Behind him the Princess was saying:

"The car is here. I shan't stop for tea, dear. In case anything happens, I am at the Embassy."

"The Russian Embassy," repeated Rue.

"Yes. I may be a little late. We are to dine here in famille at eight. You will entertain James——"

"James!" she repeated, addressing him. "Do you think James can sufficiently interesting to entertain you while I am absent?"

But all his aplomb, his lack of self-consciousness, seemed to have gone; and Neeland made some reply which seemed to him both obvious and dull. And next, himself to cause he found himself so unaccountably ashamed, realizing that he was afraid of the opinions that this young girl might entertain concerning him.

"I'm going," said the Princess. "Au revoir, dear; good-bye, James Neeland."

She looked at him keenly when he turned to face her, smiled, still considering him as though she had unexpectedly discovered a new feature in his expressive face.

Whatever she saw in it interested seemed to make her smile a trifle more mechanical; she turned slowly to Rue Carew, who, also, slowly to Rue Carew, who, also, nodded, with a gay adieu, turned and left the room with Neeland at her elbow.

"I'll tuck you in," he began; but she said:

"Thanks; Marotte will do that," and left him at the door.

When the car had driven away down the rue Soleil D'Or, Neeland returned to the little drawing-room where Rue was indulging Sandy with small bits of sugar.

He took up cup and buttered croissant, and for a little while nothing was said, except to Sandy who, upon invitation, repeated his opinion of the Sultan and snapped in the offered croissant with unstinted satisfaction.

To Rue Carew as well as to Neeland there seemed to be a slight constraint between them—something not entirely new to her since they had met again after two years.

In the two years of separation she had been very faithful to the memory of his kindness; constant in the friendship which she had given him unasked—given him first, she sometimes thought, when she was a little child in a ragged pink frock, and he was a wonderful young man who had taken the trouble to cross the pasture and warn her out of range of the guns.

He had always held his unique place in her memory and in her innocent affections; she had written to him again and again in spite of his evident lack of interest in the girl to whom he had been kind. Rare, brief letters they were, but she read and reread, and laid away with her best-loved treasures. And when the prospect of actually seeing him was presented itself she had been so frankly excited and happy that the Princess Mistchenka could find in the girl's unfeigned delight nothing except a young girl's touching and slightly amusing hero-worship.

But with the first exclamation when she caught sight of him at the terminal something about her preconceived ideas of him, and her memory of him, was suddenly and subtly altered, even while his name fell from her excited lips.

Because she had suddenly realized that he was even more wonderful than she had expected or remembered, and that she did not know him at all—that she had no knowledge of this tall, handsome, well-built young fellow with his sunburnt features and his air of smiling aloofness and of graceful assurance, almost fascinating and a trifle disturbing.

Grave and Timid

Which had made the girl rather grave and timid, uncertain of the estimation in which he might hold her; no longer so sure of any encouragement from him in her perfectly obvious attitude of a friend of former days.

And so, shyly admiring, uncertain, inclined to warm response at any advance from this wonderful young man, the girl had been trying to adjust herself to this new incarnation of a certain James Neeland who had won her gratitude and who had awed her, too, from the time when, as a little girl, she had first beheld him.

She lifted her grateful eyes to his; a little unexpected sensation not wholly unpleasant checked her speech for a moment.

This was odd, even unaccountable. Such awkwardness, such disquieting and provincial timidity wouldn't do.

"Would you mind telling me a little about Brookhollow?" she ventured.

Certainly he would tell her. He laid aside his plate and tea cup and told her of his visits there when he had walked over from Neeland's Mills in the pleasant Summer weather.

Nothing had changed, he assured her; still dam and pond and bridge, and the rushing creek below were exactly as she knew them; her house stood there at the cross-roads, silent and closed in the sunshine, and under the high moon picketed still sundials still haunted the shallow pond; partridges still frequented the alders and willows across her pasture; fireflies sailed through the Summer nights, and the crows congregated in the evening woods and talked over the events of the day.

"And my cat? You wrote that you would take care of Adoniram."

"Adoniram is an aged patriarch and occupies the place of honor by my father's house," he said.

"He is well?"

"Oh, yes. He prefers his food cut finely, that is all."

"I don't suppose he will live very long."

"He's pretty old," admitted Neeland.

She sighed and looked out of the window at the kittens in the garden. And, after an interval of silence:

"Your plot in the cemetery—is it—pretty."

"It is beautiful," he said, "under the great trees. It is well cared for. I had them plant the shrubs and flowers you mentioned in the list you sent me."

"Thank you." She lifted her eyes again to him. "I wonder if you realize how—how splendid you have always been to me."

Surprised, he reddened, and said awkwardly that he had done nothing. Where was the easy, gay and abominably assurance of this fluent young man? He was finding nothing to say to Rue Carew, or saying what he said as crudely and unworthily as any haymaker in Gayfield.

He looked up, exasperated, and met her eyes squarely. And Rue Carew blushed.

They both looked elsewhere at once, but in the girl's breast a new pulse beat; a new instinct stirred, blindly importuning her for recognition; a new confusion threatened the ordered serenity of her mind, vaguely menacing it with unaccustomed questions.

Then the instinct of self-command returned; she found composure with an effort.

"You haven't asked me," she said, "about my work. Would you like to know?"

Told Him of Work

He said he would; and she told him—chary of self-praise, yet eager that he should know that her masters had spoken well of her.

"And you know," she said, "every week, now, I contribute a drawing to the illustrated paper I wrote to you about. I sent one off yesterday. But," and she laughed shyly, "my nostrils are no longer filled with pride, because I am not contented with myself any more. I wish to do—oh, so much better work!"

"Of course. Contentment in creative work means that we have nothing more to create."

She nodded and smiled:

"The youngest born is the most tenderly cherished—until a new one comes; I am all love and devotion and tenderness and self-sacrifice while fussing over my youngest. Then a still younger comes, and I become like a heartless cat and drive away all progeny except the newly born."

Everyone's Sweetheart

The Girl in the Dark Blue Bonnet

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1919, by International Feature Service, Inc.

EVERYONE'S Sweetheart is shaking gently her tinkling tambourine to remind you that still money makes the world go round. Once the gentle tinkle of it at too street corner and the theatre door, pouring out its stream of laughter and revelation, called with a pleading note. Does it have to plead with you now? Surely not since this war! Its music has a clink of command and a note of triumph.

Who doesn't know what the life-saver was? A jolly, brown Doughnut for a Doughboy. And the girl who got it to him carried her pot of hot grease to the front-line trenches and made it under a steel hat, with the earthquake shock of guns sounding in her ears!

I know a "boy" who stutters and goes speechless when he tries to tell about that. He is eloquent on lesser things!

The delighted World hears the soft jingle of her tambourine—feels her gentle fingers groping at the keyhole of his heart—as the Salvation Army Lass kneels to turn the lock! For she has the key to it right enough. For she's everybody's Sweetheart, and even the shrivelodest-hearted, who wouldn't trust their gold and green in any other hand, will pour it in her lap and go away whistling with perfect faith that every bumbo red penny will give up its whole quota of joy, with her little hat to spend it on the "other half" of the world! That's truth. You goin' to help prove it to her? —NELL BRINKLEY.

ONCE there was a girl—who did her hair in shell-shaped muffs over her ears, who wasn't happy when she knew her nose was shiny, who had a, dark-blue serge suit with stripings of silk braid around it to wear on the street—who nimbly trotted forth in it—a slim, plump, Frenchy Silhouette, who ALWAYS wore black silk stockings and black shoes—never white ones; who had whispery-sounding taffeta like leaves in the forest at play with a soft wind, to wear in the house with crispy lawn collar and cuffs, who dreamed about war and peace, and LIBERTY VICTORY bonds, and Elsie Ferguson, and the beautiful, darling, intoxicating PRESENT—never at all about the Past who plucked at her skirts with a dark finger, or the Future who crooked a silvery one with a smile of honey, who loved lots of hats and couldn't have very many, who still wished she had been a boy for once in her rosy life when the War came and shook its sword and the young men surged to their feet and answered.

You can see very plainly that she is just one of the sweet, dainty, smart, little maids that bloom in the town. And she prayed, did she, on her folded knees, these gorgeous, incomparable days when the town is glorified by the soldier "coming home" by bewildering thousands, "Please send me a Sweetheart while the boys are still in uniform!" —NELL BRINKLEY.

When a Girl Marries

A NEW SERIAL OF YOUNG MARRIED LIFE

Ann Lisle Writes Interestingly of the Trials and Slight Jealousies of a Bride

By Ann Lisle

CHAPTER CXXII.—Continued

Copyright, 1919, King Features Syndicate Inc.

"WHAT kind, dear?" I asked.

"The fish must be—whales."

Jim* put his reply into concrete terms. This wasn't one of the things with which he proposed to mystify me.

"Anne, today I stand to lose $5,000 I borrowed from a friend," he began teasingly, then went on in a ringing voice of assurance, "but I'm not going to lose. Things are breaking right. Instead, I'm going to win—about ten times that sum. We're on our way to riches, girl. You'll have pretty clothes and a servant and a car, maybe——"

"And leave this apartment!" I cried, catching fire from Jim's enthusiasm and dreaming myself at once out of Tom Mason's apartment.

Jim laughed—a queer, twisted laugh.

"Got you going, eh? Well, don't go so fast. We—er—we can use a few trimmings of life before we get out looking for a grand home. But it's a good omen that without knowing a thing about the game I'm in you feel it, too—feel that I'm going to win."

And then at once I sobered down again and all my old fear and dread caught up with me. Jim a gambler! My Jim staking $5,000 of another man's money on some wild chance—some throw of Fortune's cards.

"Jim—so that was why you didn't even have twenty dollars to give me for my canteen uniforms," I said slowly. "You had everything tied up—in some venture. Oh, lad, what is it? Tell me all. I'll stand by no matter what happens, but I'm frightened. I don't want you to—gamble."

I brought out the words almost in a whisper—so afraid was I of giving offense.

But Jim took no offence. Instead, he laughed good-naturedly as he replied:

"This is no gamble. It's a sure thing. I've all the facts. Before the day is over Salt-Water Oil* will go from fifteen to fifty—and I hold three thousand shares on margin."

"Jim! Salt-Water Oil!—what can that be?" I gasped.

CHAPTER CXXIII.

"SALT WATER OIL," replied Jim complacently, "is the pet name a crowd of fellows down in the Street gave to an oil stock they wanted to sell short. I'm buying it on very good margin."

"Buying—when the men down in the Street are selling?" I asked, a bit nervously.

If Jim's deal went wrong, we faced a double loss—the collapse of our chance at wealth, and the hideous grind to pay back the money he had borrowed. I felt panic-stricken at the very thought. And Jim's laugh—the reckless, oversure laugh of the born gambler—did not reassure me at all. For it opened the door to a long vista. I found myself starting down a road such as I had known in my youth—the road my mother had traveled as the wife of a gambler—rose-colored plush hotel suites, alternating with dingy drab, fourth-floor-back boarding house rooms.

"Are you listening?" Jim demanded.

"Of course, dear, I'm listening. You just said that the men on the Street were selling." I replied, thinking coolly with Jim's necktie.

"I said that about half an hour ago. Anne, I wish you'd get out of the way of planning your next Spring suit—when I'm talking to you. You have had enough mind when you choose to use it and pay a little attention to worth while things."

"Yes, Jim." I replied, meekly enough. "But I'm very stupid about stocks and corporations and—and bulls and bears. The only way I can ever think which is which is to stop and remember that a bull tosses people up on his horns. And then I'm likely to get puzzled and think of the bull's characteristic as being to stamp people down with his hoofs."

Tendency to Constipation?

USE THIS LAXATIVE!

Dietitians advise a "careful diet," but that is troublesome to most people; physical culturists advise "certain exercise" which is good, but has both the time and the inclination. Doctors advise diet and exercise and medicine. The question is, shall it be a cathartic or purgative medicine? Or a mild, gentle laxative?

Thousands have decided the question to their own satisfaction by using a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. A small dose gives a free, easy movement of the bowels. It is the best substitute for nature herself, in fact, since the ingredients are wholly from the vegetable kingdom it may truthfully be said it is a natural laxative.

Its positive but gentle action on the bowels makes it an ideal remedy for constipation. The dose is small, and it may be taken with perfect safety until the bowels are regulated and act again of their own accord.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

PRICE AS ALWAYS

In spite of greatly increased laboratory cost due to the War, by sacrificing profits and absorbing war taxes we have maintained the price at which this family laxative has been sold by druggists for the past forty years. You obtain 50c and $1.00.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN The Perfect Laxative

For Summer Dressmaking

SOME TIMELY AND VALUABLE HINTS

By Rita Stuyvesant

MANY women do not make their own or their daughters' clothes at home because they are afraid they will have "that home-made look" so repellent to the really smart dresser. But the shops have foreseen this condition and very cleverly have found a remedy in the "half-begun" garments they are offering at such reasonable prices. Very often it is the finishing details of work that add so much to the cost, so that if you are at all handy with the needle, as the saying goes, you will reap the benefit of this suggestion.

Well-cut serge or wash skirts are selling for about half price, because you have to adjust your own belt and turn up the hem. Sometimes if the skirt buttons up the front, you will need to sew on buttons to fit the ready-made buttonholes. But all details such as slit pockets, patch pockets and plaits are already completed.

For Summer days there is lovely fine organdie in dainty colors, that is just waiting to be made up into cool frocks. The material is laid in two inch tucks, find rows of them marked by good hemstitching. Any simple pattern may be used to cut the frock, and no other trimming is needed.

For the frivolous girl who loves frills, yet who is not accurate enough to make a frock, there is also material that will suit her needs. Organdie and voile are chosen and favored with a number of tiny ruffles, fluted and pleated, ready to use. This is shown in all the Summer shades, such as orchid, sky blue, pink and corn color, and the price varies according to the quality.

White organdie, either tucked or "full of frills," makes cunning frocks for youngsters, and busy mothers will find this prepared material will save hours of time and trouble.

For evening wear there are robes of jeweled material, half made. Then there are fine colored nets, handsomely embroidered in glittering beads. They are exquisite made up over satin foundations. Net and jet are well met on another distinctive black fabric, and any evening gown will owe its charm to this beautiful combination.

Not only are the dresses half ready to wear, but underwear, too, can be purchased with all the fine details completed. Pretty satin and crepe de chine chemises, trimmed and ribbon trimmed and can be cut off at convenient lengths for dainty camisoles. Only a casing for elastic, a front fold and ribbon shoulder straps, and your smart yet inexpensive camisola is done in a jiffy.

Not Very Fair

A schoolmaster, in order to punish two unruly boys, ordered them to remain after school hours and write their names five hundred times. They plunged into the task. Fifteen minutes later one of them grew uneasy and began watching his companion in disgrace. Suddenly the first one burst out sobbing. "'Tain't fair, sir!" he said to the teacher. "He hasn't Booth and mine's Winterbotham."

Household Hints

Fish should be very carefully examined and thoroughly cleaned. After being well washed, fish, before it is fried, needs drying well in a clean cloth. Some fish, such as haddock, whiting or cod, require to be cut open before they can be emptied, while others, such as sole or plaice, can have the entrails drawn out through the gills. Be careful not to disfigure the fish, but clean it thoroughly and see that no stains or black skin is left inside.

If there is a roe, this should be allowed to remain if the fish is small, but if large, it must be removed and cooked separately. If the fish feels slimy, rub it well with a little salt. Scales should be scraped off with a knife, scraping from the tail upwards and the fish well rinsed afterwards. If the scales are hard to remove, as is sometimes the case with freshwater fish, dip the fish in boiling water for a moment.

To remove tar stains from cotton fabrics, cover with butter and allow it to remain for a few hours before washing.

* * *

To restore a navy-blue skirt to its former good condition, take equal parts vinegar and linseed oil, shake well and apply with a polish rag; after well rubbing, polish with another soft dry cloth.

Stocks Strong in a Buoyant New York Market

MOTORS CLIMB AND STEELS ADVANCE

Week Begins With Great Demand for All Classes of Securities

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong on New York at noon, after starting on a higher level, and holding gains well as a rule, all the morning. There was enough profit taking on the advance to affect some groups, but without being reacted a little others began to ascend. Motors were the strongest class, led by General Motors and Studebaker. The last named showed a gain of more than seven points after its best. U. S. Steel sold up to 109¾ during the forenoon.

Chandler sold at its highest record price, and among those to sell at their highest for 1919 to date were Crucible, U. S. Steel Subsidiaries, Midvale, Willys Overland, Studebaker, Anaconda, Utah Copper, Chino, Kennecott, Texas Co., Pacific Oil and Sinclair house, Southern Pacific, American Locomotive and Goodrich.

Trading in the morning was attended by considerable excitement. The public demand for steel, motor, rubber, electric, tobacco, and, in fact, almost every kind of stocks. Share transactions in the first hour totalled about 479,000 shares.

Crucible was the strongest steel, showing more than four points advance in its highest. U. S. Steel showed a gain of 1¾ at its best.

PRICES HIGHER AT OPENING.

At the opening the market continued the demonstration of strength which made Saturday's short session memorable. Trading on that day was in excess of the two-million share ratio. U. S. Steel sold at its highest for the year today on its first transaction and American Woolen common and General Motors started at highest record prices. Within 15 minutes of the opening 200 changes were crossed. All classes of stocks were strong in early trading. Over Sunday orders had accumulated from all over the land and seldom has such demand been known at the beginning of an exchange business. There was a wide opening on the list, ranging at 100 to 1401. Mexican Petroleum was the strongest oil at the start. Rails and coppers shared with industrials, while shipping issues were carried with the rising tide. Within an hour gains ranged from fractions to more than five points. As a class motors led in this respect.

JUDGE GARY'S ADDRESS.

The more Judge Gary's latest address to steel manufacturers was studied the more it impressed. It is said in financial district to exhibit the optimism of the American people. Its effect demonstrated the confidence which the opinion of the U. S. Steel corporation's chairman inspires. The placing of orders by Director General Hines was another factor influence, and the advance of steel issues was of benefit to the whole list. The Saturday bank statement was taken to presage a reduction in money rates, and last week's trade reports were generally favorable. There is general expectation that Germany will accept the peace terms offered, and that as soon as the treaty is signed business will expand faster.

What the War Cost

The United States was not at war long, but its war expenditures due to the end of April this year totalled $21,294,000,000, exclusive of loans to Allies. An idea of the expense of modern fighting may be gained by a comparison of that amount with what has been spent altogether in this country for railroad construction. Investments in railroads in the United States are estimated at amounts from $18,000,000,000 to $20,000,000,000.

Quicksilver's Price Advance

Quicksilver has advanced 20 per cent to $95 a flask. Business is sharply dwindled and the demand increased.

COPPER ISSUES HIGHER IN BOSTON

Trading Is Broad and Active on the Local Exchange

Trading was active at the outset on the local exchange and the Boston market was strong from the start. Coppers were more of a feature during the morning than for some time, Mohawk, Quincy, Osceola and Old Dominion leading out to gains, being up from a point to more than two, while low-priced coppers ruled fractionally higher. United Shoe was among the most active issues and advances fractionally. Others to figure prominently on the tape were Waldorf and Highland. Amoskeag sold at its highest record price and American Woolen preferred at its year's highest. Swift & Co. advanced a point, and Warren Brothers more than two. American Bosch Magneto sold at 100, up 4. The market was broad and the tone improved steadily during the forenoon.

Coppers were aided upward by the announcement that the Mexican government had removed its embargo on the importation of copper, which will mean an increase in foreign demand for the metal.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE HAS THE MOST STOCKHOLDERS

The American Telephone and Telegraph company is said to have more stockholders than the U. S. Steel Corporation, the Pennsylvania railroad or any other corporation in existence. In 1918, holders of its shares numbered 112,420.

Notable changes in the list at the end of April this year was the reduction from 42,233 shares held last year by the Cranes of Westfield and Dalton, to 18,916 on April 1 last. A decrease was due chiefly to the dissolution of all of Thomas Cushing's estate, which totalled 14,523 shares on April 1 a year ago. W. Murray Crane appointed executor, sold 3,500 shares and the listed amount was reduced from 15,000 to 3,000 shares during the year. Frederick G. Crane's present total of 800 shares represents a reduction of 2,800 shares.

Helvetia's Oil Operations

A local financial publication says: "The Pittsburg Pipe Line Machinery Corporation reports earnings of $7,495,120, which compare with $6,127,372 for the year ended February 28, 1918, and $4,774,452 for the year ended February 28, 1917. After a reserve of $1,000,000 for war taxes and allowance for preferred stock, the balance for the common was $5,901,000 equal to $3.45 a share on the 1,700,000 shares compared with $3.46 and $6.02 per share, respectively, in the two previous years.

Dividend Declarations

Galena Signal oil Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent, payable June 1 on preferred, payable June 30 to stock of record May 31.

North American Co. declared usual quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent, payable June 1 on stock of record May 27.

Pittsburgh Coal Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 1½ a share on common and 87½c a share on preferred. The common dividend is payable June 14 on stock of record May 31; preferred on May 31 on stock of record May 21 and preferred May 31 on stock of record May 20.

ACTRESS CLEVER AS CAMERA ARTIST

Marjie Wilson Can Take Photograph Resembling Oil Painting

To be an expert photographer, expert in every meaning of the word, is one distinction given Miss Marjie Wilson at the Gayety Theatre this week with the "Step Lively Girls."

Miss Wilson is a California girl and was born and raised at Los Angeles. When she was quite a young girl her father bought her a cheap little camera, more as a toy than for any good pictures expected from it.

But little Marjie studied her father in taking very artistic and well focused pictures. In fact, she did such good work that her father bought her one of the best cameras he could secure and for years Miss Wilson has developed her spare time to the taking and finishing of pictures.

She seemed to have the natural gift in taking a picture, of picking a position on any ordinary subject, pressing the button and getting a photograph that looks like an oil painting. After a time she became a recognized expert photographer by the other expert photographers on the stage.

Today Miss Wilson is just as enthusiastic as ever on photography and has taken a number of prize pictures for my work in contests run by various trade magazines.

She is also a splendid expert in focus, light and time and also in the finishing touches. She has been operated moving picture cameras on various occasions near her home in Los Angeles and "shots" quite a number of scenes for picture plays, which were afterwards reproduced on the screen.

CURATORS' ANGLING NETS AQUARIUM 200 GOLDFISH

About 200 fine goldfish were added to the collection at the aquarium in South Boston as a result of an expedition by Curator Charles F. Morse, Jr., and several assistants to Scarboro pond in Franklin Park.

The pond was thoroughly raked and in addition to the goldfish, for the securing of which the expedition had been planned, thousands of sun-fish and pout were hauled in. These fish will be given to Park Commissioner Long for fishing through the ice, and because of their lack of value at this season they were released.

Packing Combine Rumor

A trade circles rumor is to the effect that a large amalgamation of packing companies is planned, including independents in five or six cities. It is reported that a New York banking firm is behind the merger and has bought outright control of a few of the concerns to be included.

Cuba Cane's Production

The Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation will surpass its estimated production for the current season, it having 4,-100,000 bags so far, although only one of its centrals has finished its output.

Let Us Preserve American Market for Americans

Facing a war debt which, at its lowest reckoning, is more than ten times as large as the debt our fathers faced at the end of the Civil War, we shall little question the Republican Congressional caucus' assertion of the need of tariff legislation "designed to increase the revenues from imports."

Or, stated a bit more accurately, there will be little dissent from the statement that with real economy must go increased income, whether we get it by taxing imports at the port of entry or by taxing the incomes of those who profit by the traffic in those imports after they clear the customs.

While there may be room for reasonable debate as to the place where and methods whereby this increased revenue tax shall be levied, we can see no possible ground of objection to the Republican Congressional caucus' further demand for and promise of tariff legislation designed "to afford adequate protection to American labor and industries."

How can American labor and industries possibly be in peril from the demoralized and war-harried industries of Europe?

They can be and we think they are in precisely the same peril from them that an established and prosperous business concern is in from a competitor desperate in fear of bankruptcy.

Any merchant will tell you he would rather that his rivals should be prosperous and steady than hysterical and reckless.

In the one case he can usually forecast what they will do and plan accordingly, whereas in the other he is at sea.

Take, for illustration, the product called dyes.

Before the war Germany monopolized them. During the war, spurred by necessity, we learned to make them. The exact extent to which our capacity for successful domestic dye production has been developed is not clear because the testimony of the experts is conflicting. It is, however, reasonable to suppose that this infant industry is not yet strong enough to stand alone against the desperate assaults of the experienced German dye makers, frantic with eagerness to regain a lost monopoly of immense profitableness.

Dyes are not the only things we used to import, but now make for ourselves. There is also, for another illustration, optical glass. The ability of the American people to make all the dyes they need and all the lenses is a very great asset to a nation wishing to be as independent, economically, as it has become politically.

The war has taught those of us who can discriminate between hard facts and illusions that it is not safe for this great democratic republic of ours to be at the mercy of any foreign Power, political or economic.

It has revealed with startling vividness, though at great expense, the need of constant vigilance and adequate preparedness.

It has shown that of the many forms of preparedness industrial preparedness, thanks to the distance between us and our great rival and jealous Powers and to the intelligence with which we have provided ourselves with the beginnings of a sufficient navy, comes first.

It was our industrial strength which enabled us to equip and feed our associates in the war beyond their own limited resources while we were assembling the military forces that finally delivered the knockout blow.

Industrial preparedness, all-round, complete, is the great secret of modern safety, and it behooves us to make certain that we shall not again be helplessly dependent on any foreign and possibly hostile source for things which a genuinely American policy of foresight would enable us to produce for ourselves.

So fundamentally the use of tariffs to keep out floods of foreign made products at the expense of domestic labor, domestic industry and, in the long run, domestic safety, is as much a duty of the national defence as is the maintenance of an alert and adequate navy, of coast defence guns and of a citizenry trained to self-reliant combat when the need for it is urgent.

In our recent engrossment in altruistic adventures we paid too little attention to home needs. The time has come to get back to earth, and to that particular part of the earth on which we and our children are destined to live.

We have before us a great and intricate variety of reconstruction problems and reconstruction tasks, but the first concern of all of us is the welfare of America.

At the base of that welfare lies the need for steady employment of American labor at wages which will maintain a high standard of living.

This base is threatened (how much we do not know) by the existence in an impoverished world of great masses of idle workers eager for employment on the lowest terms.

We are humane enough to wish to see them put to work. We are willing to go to great lengths to aid in their wholesome employment. But we are not fantastic or insane enough to wish for the leveling up of this foreign destitution by the destruction of our own standards.

Around the great home market of America let patriotic Americans unite to build a wall of firm protection within which the productive genius of America may feel safe.

KEEPING UP YOUR STANDARDS IN THE CITY

You, young man from the country, are you going the city pace because you think you can and no one will be the wiser?

How would you feel if you thought your mother, or that little girl in the home town, knew some of the things which you have done since you became a city resident?

But you comfort yourself with the thought that they will never know. Eases your conscience, does it?

Aren't you losing a lot of self-respect?

You say it is impossible for you to meet and mingle with the same class of persons in the city that you were accustomed to in the old home town.

Your standards then were of the best.

In your desire for associates you deliberately lower your standards to the level of those who are quick to become acquainted with and salve your conscience by the thought that when you have money enough to retire you will go back to the town and the friends you love.

First of all, at the rate you are going, you never will accumulate that little pile to enable you to live back home.

And pursued, the life you are leading is going to get such a hold on you that you never can let go.

Patter and Chatter

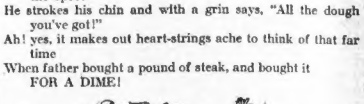
SWEET MEMORIES

WE'VE heard of many memories as down the trail we roam,
From "memories that bless and burn" to memories of home.
Some little girl we used to love, some beautiful refrain—
Like subway guards they crowd and shove through many a mortal's brain.
But mostly now we recollect that long-forgotten time
When father bought a pound of steak, and bought it FOR A DIME!

NOW, while the lights are soft and low in Boston-by-the-Sea,
Those memories of the long ago keep coming back to me.
One hard, thin dime procured that steak with extra weight to spare.
The steak that father bought was round, although this yarn is square.
No wonder recollections break the thread of this brief rhyme—
When father bought a pound of steak, and bought it FOR A DIME!

WE'RE dwelling in "apartments" now. Our purse is never full,
For when we order sirloin cow, or maybe sirloin bull,
And when we ask the butcher, "How much dough, cash on the spot?"
He strokes his chin and with a grin says, "All the dough you've got!"
Ah! yes, it makes out heart-strings ache to think of that far time
When father bought a pound of steak, and bought it FOR A DIME!



LITTLE SONGS OF SUNSHINE

There was a young damsel named Mae,
Who was happy and sunny all day.
In her golden-hair dome
There was nobody home,
Which kept the bad headaches away.

There was a nice girl known as Flossie,
Who grinned when her boss got too bossy.
These cute little birds
Are too nervy for words—
While the Jane who is plain can't get saucy.

ONE OF the joys.
OF LIVING in the country.
IS THAT every little while.
ONE OF your neighbors.
WHO HAS a car.
STOPS IN front of your house.
AND SAYS he's going to town.
AND DO you want anything.
AND THE other day.
WHEN A neighbor stopped.
WITH HIS willing Ford.
I HAD him wait.
WHILE A list was prepared.
OF NUMEROUS things.
AND GOT my hat.
AND WENT along.
AND WE got to town.
AND HE parked his car.
AND WE pooled our list.
AND THE hardware things.
AND THE vegetables.
HE WAS going to get.
AND IT fell to me.
TO GO to the butcher's.
AND THE village baker.
AND I went along.
AND GOT his meat.
AND GOT our meat.
AND WENT to the bakeshop.
AND GOT two pies.
AND A jelly roll.
AND A bag of buns.
AND CARRIED them all.
TO THE waiting Ford.
IN THE line of cars.
ALONG THE curb.
AND PUT them away.
ON THE floor in the back.
AND HE wasn't through.
WITH THE list he had.
AND I went down.
TO WHERE he was.
AND THEN helped him.
WITH A bag of nails.
AND A garbage can.
AND A piece of pump.
AND SOME other things.
AND THEN went back.
WHERE HIS Ford was.
AND I'LL eat my hat.
IF THE Ford I picked.
WASN'T SOME other Ford.
AND IT wasn't there.
AND HAD gone away.
WITH ALL our pies.
AND THE bag of buns.
AND THE loaves of bread.
AND TWO days' meat.
AND I left him there.
TO GUARD the spot.
WHERE THE false Ford was.
AND RAN all over town.
LOOKING IN Fords.
AND STOPPING Fords.
TILL I almost died.
AND WHEN I got back.
THE OTHER Ford.
HAD JUST pulled in.
IN THE rear of our Ford.
AND WE got our stuff.
AND BEAT it for home.
IN A line of Fords.

I THANK you.

CHANCE MAY SHOW THE ROAD TO SUCCESS

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

WHAT is that something in us that makes us like certain things and dislike others, that consciousness which makes us feel we can do this and cannot do something else which is as simple as A, B, C to our neighbor?

I, for instance, have an inner sense that I want to write. I seize a pen and do so. Another woman wants to trim a hat, and does so with charming results. I look at her with awe and wonder.

If I try to trim a hat, it looks like a hay-rick. If she tries to write a story, it sounds like: "Do you see the blue shoes of my grandmother's niece's daughter?"

I know a man who makes a fortune with the same ease that an acrobat turns a handspring. Sometimes he is careless enough to lose a fortune; then he sets to work and makes another one. If you ask him how he does it, he looks at you pityingly and says:

"Nothing to it. Any idiot can make money."

Analyze Yourself

Of course, we can talk learnedly about "special aptitudes," or "the natural inclination intensified by special training," or "some strong suggestion impressed upon the plastic child mind." It sounds explanatory, but, like many other explanatory things, it doesn't explain.

And you may say: "It is all very well to insist that every one has some special ability which if developed will insure him happiness and content in his work; but if I have anything of the kind I haven't discovered it. I am as intelligent as most people, but I have no particular bent or leaning in any direction."

Then you look at me triumphantly as if to say: "Now, what about it?"

I come back to you with a pet theory of mine. I believe we do well that thing we are not in the least afraid of tackling, the thing that for some reason seems easy and natural to us.

So, before you deny that you have any natural inclination in a particular direction, suppose you think things over a bit. Sit down in a chair and watch yourself go by; that is a very salutary mental exercise taken occasionally.

You never want to give too much time to yourself, or you will get to be one of those tiresome, introspective egotists. But a little calm, unbiased contemplation of yourself now and then is good for the soul.

What did you like best to do when a child? What sort of games, or studies, or books, or objects in nature interested you most? What do you remember being praised for?

There is a very remarkable girl in one of the shops to whom I instinctively turn when my wardrobe needs refurbishing. She will turn over a quantity of garments with great rapidity.

"You don't want this, nor this, nor this," she will say.

"Oh, wait!" I exclaim. "That looks attractive."

She holds it up, looks reflectively from it to me, and then shakes her head.

"No; you wouldn't look well in that."

So she goes on until she finds something that I know at once is for me, or else she says:

"We have nothing now that will suit you, but I know exactly what you want and will get it for you as soon as it comes in."

A Dependable Person

And if she sells you a frock, she may suggest certain little touches that will improve it, and she will either say: "You can wear that hat you have on with it," or suggest that you wear a larger one or a smaller one, as the lines of the frock may require.

She is a port in a storm, and can always be depended on. I asked her one day what her recipe for infallibility was, and she said:

"Oh, I have always had a sort of sixth sense of line and color. When I was a child I was forever mentally dressing people up. They used to tell me I would become a designer or a great dressmaker, but I couldn't design anything, nor sew well enough to make clothes for my doll. I just know what things will suit certain types of women, and I like to tell them what to wear. Of course, some persons won't listen; but there are many who do rely on my taste, and they say their clothes are always admired when I select them."

Laws Do Improve

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright, 1919.)

Begin a working week with a cheerful statement. Laws do improve.

For instance, the first written laws on man-killing are those of Khammurabi, many centuries old. They include this: "If a man strikes a gentlemen's daughter, that she dies, his own daughter is to be put to death; if a poor man's daughter, the slayer pays one-half mina."

It is as though you read today: "If you kill the daughter of a millionaire, your own daughter shall be put to death. But if you kill the daughter of a poor man, you shall be fined a few dollars." That would be startling.

Mr. James, a careful correspondent for the New York Times, is beginning the work of untelling false tales. There were NO German gunners chained to their guns to keep them from running away. There were NO German dying women scattering dynamite on cities. And as Lord Northcliffe testified long ago, there were NO soldiers or women nailed to crosses by Germans, and NO German soldiers proudly exhibiting hands and legs chopped from the living bodies of young children.

Who ever tries to contradict all the lies of a great war will be busy for many years. Such stories accompany every war and are supposed to make men fight better.

Washington exhibits a tiny bottle filled with killing gas so deadly that the German gas would be infant's food compared with it. One drop of the gas poured on the palm of your hand would penetrate to the blood, reach the heart and cause agonizing death. Dropped by fliers in quantities this poison would have killed the millions in Berlin or any great city. This country was making the gas at the rate of ten tons a day when war ended. That its appearance at the front would have ended the war there can be no doubt.

It required war and wholesale murder to show what a republic can do, including even the miracle of taxing wealth.

More pleasant than scientific methods of killing by millions is the suggestion of a six-hour working day for all. It comes from England. A great English employer, Lord Leverhulme, who builds model cities, establishes co-partnership with his workers, believes that contentment for millions is more important that extra profits for a few.

Leverhulme tells English employers what W. R. Hearst told the eight-hour committee in Congress years ago, that SHORT HOURS ARE BETTER FOR THE WORKER AND BETTER FOR THE EMPLOYER.

Hearst could testify that eight hours are enough, because he was practicing throughout his plants, with success, what he advocated for others. Leverhulme declares war work has shown that in a week of short hours the worker actually produced MORE than in a week of longer hours, and he intends to try the six-hour day.

"Take your choice, contented workmen or anarchy," says Leverhulme, who is the kind of citizen England needs.

He advocates developing the idea gradually, first in mechanical production, making the MACHINE work twenty-four hours while men work six and rest, play, study and sleep eighteen.

That is what should and could have been done when machines were first invented. Instead, they took women from sixteen hours' work with the needle and transferred them, in England and in New England, to sixteen hours' work in the mill.

Nothing more outrageous is to be found in the history of using public money for private benefit than the management of American railroads. To "meet the deficit," which means to patch up and rebuild the run-down properties, the people must now provide one billion, two hundred millions of dollars. This is in addition to the heavily increased rates that the people have paid for railroad service and in addition to billions already put into the mismanaged roads.

And the government admits that hundreds of millions spent on the roads will not be repaid to the taxpayers when the roads are returned, presently, to the private owners. As Northcliffe truly says, this is a very DOCILE people. It gets used to being robbed, likes to being skinned.

Injustice horrifies us all. But there is one good thing about the fashion in which the Allies and America allowed Japan to rob poor old China. The Chinese have memory, they are powerful, needing only leadership, which will develop some day.

China already talks of goods from Japan as "enemy goods," much to the distress of Japan. The world can probably rely on Japanese treatment of China to keep Japan busy and especially to prevent what would be the most dangerous of all things for civilization, A COMBINATION OF ASIATIC POWERS UNDER JAPAN'S LEADERSHIP AGAINST WESTERN CIVILIZATION.
